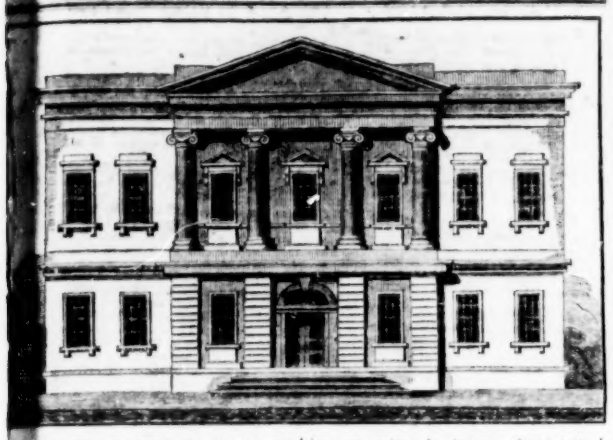
Atkinson's Saturday Evening Post

A FAMILY NEWSPAPER, DEVOTED TO LITERATURE, MORALITY, SCIENCE, NEWS, AGRICULTURE AND AMUSEMENT.

Vol. XI. PHILADELPHIA, MARCH 3, 1832. Whole No. 553.



THE UNITED STATES' BRANCH BANK AT NEW YORK.

This elegant edifice was commenced in the year of 1822, but owing to the epidemic with which the city was visited, the progress of the building was so much delayed, that it was not completed till the spring of 1824. It was first used for the transaction of business in April of that year. It is composed of white marble from the quarries of Westchester. It fronts sixty feet on Wall street, and is about seventy feet deep, occupying a lot that cost almost as much as the building itself, $40,000. It is formed in the most substantial manner, and is altogether fire proof. The banking room is thirty feet in height, and surrounded by a gallery. Besides this room, there are other apartments for the accommodation of directors, stockholders, with those occupied as a loan office, and for the payment of United States' pensioners, &c. The beauty of the structure is greatly enhanced by the gallery, vestibule and portico.

For the Saturday Evening Post.

HOURS OF GLOOM.

My thoughts are wrapp'd in midnight gloom—
There comes no joyful sound,—
Sadness, deeper than the tomb,
And darkness more profound.

Black clouds in confing volumes roll,
And scorn a ray of light
Come not to cheer my fainting soul,
Amid the starless night!

Each yet lives, and Hope survives
Life keeply, the' unseen,
Beyond against Fate's weapon strives,
Darts fly thick and keen.

Triumph not, ye souls as crew!
Reason your mirth a while,
Brighter scenes shall rise to view,
And fortune once more smile.

Whether fortune smile or frown,
My soul is still the same,—
Naught on earth may cast it down,
Save infamy and shame!

The worry one, who fills all space,
And governs e'ry part,
Will never suffer foul disgrace
To reach a noble heart.

Then rail, ye scorners! I am strong
In consciousness of right;
Yet, with clear voice I'll raise my song
To join the choir of light!

O. G.

For the Saturday Evening Post.

A FAMILIAR EPISTLE.

Tom, my coz, a few lines more, and thy saucer-ox cream is done; a phrase in my last requires explanation. "Virtues in minature," what is it?—In my passage through life, I now discover among the multitudes, persons having many bright qualities, that go to make up every virtue that constitutes the character of the christian; virtues which, were they united and caused to expand, would appear the possessor an halo of unearthly glory. Beings have sometimes, though rarely, in my view, and caused me to linger on the stage, till the warning voice of my guardian angel has bid me beware.

Tom, I consider a wicked man to be loaded with demons of darkness,—a selfish though not absolutely wicked, as one alone, on who speeds his upward flight against time and tide of time, who cultivates every of the soul in the highest degree, is one followed by angels,* or spirits made perfect—the man fearing God, despising evil, and aiming to virtue's sake," though not assiduously engaged in keeping the garden of his heart; one I consider as being surrounded with spirits; but, to advance an idea, which I present original, they are minat spirits, or virtues in miniature!

* The term angel is sometimes given to the particles of the heart.

For the Saturday Evening Post.

WARREN.

Brief, brave, and glorious was thy young career
Age freedom hallows with her fond tear,
The shield of the land!
Thy beautiful in death as thy life,
Who ever fully fill in her story,
Warren.

How does the deep feeling of these lines come home, when I think on the fate of Warren,
martyr in a noble cause—yes,—

There is a tear for all that die,
A mourner over the hopes of youth,
And a tear for the hoary age
That hath lived out its term,
But there is a tear for the young and the brave,
Who fall in their youthful prime,
And weep the more over the grave
Where we bury our hopes and our love.

To those to crowds that knew them not,
Unknown to admiring fame,
Who sought not their cheer, glorious lot!
Who sought not the death they chose!

We need not go to Roman or to Grecian story,
for instances of the sublime in valour, or the beautiful in patriotism. We have them at home.
They have left their light on our own native land,
that light rests on her free institutions, and lives in the hearts of her sons; and there we hope, it will live forever. We have as a legacy, the memory of Warren. A legacy which cannot be taken from us. Which, as we regard it, will either prove our honour or our shame. When others,—when our thoughts turn coldly to the times that tried men's souls—when dreams of feeling though not dried up, are cold, and the names of the worthy fall upon us, like the rain drop on the rock, without emotion or effect—then, we may be assured, the "mountain nymph, sweet liberty," is leaving her footsteps sorrowing look, from our eastern home; and that disunion, strife, and their train of ills are gathering against us, as clouds of the tempest, when it is preparing to sweep the earth in its desolating wrath. The name of Warren should be enshrined in the heart of every young American;—the recollection of his virtues—his sacrifice—like the lamp in the Hebrew temple, which the watchful eye and steady hand of the ministering devotee never suffered to wax dim for want of the sustaining oil, should have its flame perpetual—

For he was freedom's champion, one of those,
Few in number, who had the courage
The charter to maintain, which she bestows
Unchecked, or not, as we choose to find it.
Who, in the hour of danger, in the cause
Of their country, not shrank nor trembled, but
Rushed onward, and, when others fled, stood firm
Unmoved, and, when others wept, stood firm
Unmoved

ner, Dorcas, Ellen will not first see off; and old Pinchard will cling to me, why should I throw away happiness?"

"Certainly, certainly! There is much happiness before you."

"The thought is transporting, that I shall soon have the pleasure of gaily and disinterestedly for ever, and breathe the fresh and balmy atmosphere of fortune once again! How I long for the time! Mother, will you watch over your prodigal son?" Here little he thought of the affecting reminiscence he had called forth in my mind, by mentioning "the prodigal son!"

I left him about nine o'clock, promising him to retire to rest, and not expose himself to the cold of the evening. I felt confident myself, by the tone of our conversation, which, I suspected, however, had on his part, varied for some concealed flightiness. I had not such sanguine hopes for him, as he entertained for himself. I suspected that his emotions, however it might suit for a time, from his present prostration, had received a check, before which it need cry while fall!

About five o'clock the next morning, I and all my family were alarmed by one of the most violent and continued ringings and thumpings at the door I ever heard. On looking out of my bedroom window, I saw Mr. Beauchamp's valet below, swinging his hands, and stamping about the pavement like one distracted.

Full of fearful apprehension, I dressed myself in an instant and came down stairs.

"In the name of God, what is the matter?" I inquired, seeing him pale as ashes.

"Oh, my master! Come, come!" he should get out no more. We, both ran at a top speed to Mr. Beauchamp's lodgings. Even at that early hour there was an agitated group before the door. I rushed up stairs, and soon learnt all. About a quarter of an hour before, the family were disturbed by hearing Mr. Beauchamp's Newfoundland dog, which always slept at his master's bedroom door, howling, whining, and scratching against it. The valet and others also came to see what was the matter. They found the dog frantic violently, his eyes fixed on the floor; and on looking down they now blood flowing from under the door. The valet threw himself half frantic against the door, and burst it open, he rushes in and saw all! Poor Beauchamp, with a razor grasped in his right hand, was lying on the floor lifeless.

I never new hear of a young man, especially of fortune, frequenting the GAMING TABLE, but I think with a tear of Henry Beauchamp.

To the Editor of the Saturday Evening Post.

In your paper last week, Sir, a notice I find,
Designed, its express's, to amuse the young mind;
To solve then the problem, this answer I venture,
And trust that you'll find it according to "Gender."

$\frac{3}{5}$ of $\frac{1}{4}$ of $\frac{3}{5}$ of $\frac{100}{1} = \frac{900}{100} = 9$ initial - N

$\frac{1}{3}$ of $\frac{12}{1} = \frac{12}{3} = 4 \div 4 = 0$ " - O

$\frac{1}{3}$ of $\frac{3}{2}$ of $\frac{21}{1} = \frac{63}{6} = 7$ " - S

$\frac{3}{5}$ of $\frac{90}{1} = \frac{270}{5} = 72 \div 9 = 8$ " - E

NOSE.

These initials I see in due order to place—
Will name that most prominent part of the face;
Should this answer prove useful to any Quad Nose,
Its insertion will please, yours, W. R. M'ck.

Evening Post.

☞ Containing, perhaps, a larger amount of reading matter, than is furnished in any other paper; its weekly contents are written, selected and prepared expressly for this, and without reference to any other weekly or daily publication.

There were 123 deaths in this city last week—35 adults—88 children. Thirteen were from the Almshouse, and 4 were people of colour.—Of the whole number 16 were caused by consumption of the lungs, 15 by scarlet fever, 10 by convulsions, and 10 by measles.

Two numbers of a new religious paper, under the title of The World, as it is, and as it should be, are before us. They evince considerable editorial ability. The conductor, Mr. C. W. Denison, late editor of the Stonington Phenix, is a chaste and energetic writer, and will no doubt succeed in throwing much interest into the columns of his paper. It is dedicated especially to the promulgation of the principles of the strict Baptists.

A new Post Office has been established in Coweta County, Georgia, called "Watson's," and Thomas Watson, Esq. appointed Postmaster.

The Postmaster General has also established a Post Office in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, twelve miles north of Harrisburg, called "Oak Dale." James Buchanan, Esq. has been appointed Postmaster.

The Antimasonic State Convention which organised at Harrisburg, last week, unanimously nominated JOSEPH RITNER, Esq. of Washington county, as a candidate for governor. One hundred and five delegates attended.

A joint resolution has passed the legislature of Indiana, requesting the president and directors of the United States Bank to establish one or more branches in that State.

The Brig Java, captain Osgood, was wrecked off the mouth of Nauset harbour, Cape Cod, on the 6th ult. Cargo was nearly all lost.

A Boston paper mentions that during the parade, on the 22d ult. a respectable lady was run over and instantly killed, by a horse and sleigh, the shafts of the latter having passed through her body. The horse became frightened by the report of cannon, at the time the artillery were firing a salute.

A correspondent, under date of Ghent, Ky., Feb. 16th, writes as follows:—"The Ohio River is now higher than it was ever seen before by the oldest settlers; and it is still rising fast. The water has undermined and destroyed much property. Several entire houses have passed down the river; large stacks of hay and grain are constantly passing; and frequently several thousand rails may be seen at the same time, floating down the stream. The damage sustained by the freshet is immense."

The corps of Washington Greys returned to this city on Tuesday, after an absence of about ten days. The members speak in the highest terms of the kind treatment they received at their several stopping places, and appear much pleased with their excursion. The corps was escorted into the city by the Philadelphia and National Greys, and the City Phalanx.

The New York passengers due here on Tuesday evening, did not arrive—says the Chronicle of Wednesday—until after nine o'clock, the next morning, owing to the boat having grounded on the Pennsylvania shore, about ten miles above the city, in a dense fog which prevailed. The passengers did not arrive at Trenton until about four o'clock, which made it impossible to reach the city before dark; and when they had come within eight or ten miles of the city, the night closed in, and one of the heaviest fogs arose that ever was witnessed on our waters. No land mark or star could be discerned through it, and it was determined, with the passengers' consent, to come to anchor. Having lain at anchor until near eleven o'clock, the fog for a while appeared to disperse, and steam was immediately raised in hopes of proceeding on without further hindrance; but shortly after they had got under weigh, the fog again thickened, and persevering to steer from memory, for some fifteen minutes, she stuck fast upon the flats just below Ten Mile Point, where the ebb tide left her stern out of water. The captain having made the best possible provisions for his passengers, manned the small boat and started for the city, where he procured another steamboat and returned to the spot, in which all arrived here in safety.

Much praise is given Captain Davis for his untiring exertions and indefatigable efforts to render the situation of the passengers as comfortable as possible. Between one and two hundred persons were on board the boat.

Extract to the Editor of the Saturday Evening Post, dated

Washington City, 24th Feb. 1832.

The resolution of Mr. Clayton, from Georgia, on the subject of the U. S. Bank, occupied the House yesterday and to-day. In the Senate yesterday, Mr. Dallas, of Pennsylvania, presented his speech upon the tariff, and continued to-day. You have doubtless heard him speak in the courts of your city, and do not care about a description of his manner here. A short comparison with those who have preceded him in this debate, may not be uninteresting. He is, in Philadelphia, considered a strong man—but here his argument is considered more grateful than powerful. This is no disparagement to him. He is far superior to many here, but in comparison with Mr. Webster, Mr. Clay, or Mr. Hayne, he suffers amazingly; my pride that I ever saw will suffer in this comparison. The close reasoning—the overpowering eloquence—and the sweet music of the voice of Gen. Hayne, I have never heard surpassed. I should think Mr. Clay his equal, but not his superior. The calm and quiet dignity which marks Mr. Webster's every act in the senate, attracts the attention and admiration of all who see him. That deep reflection which marks his countenance, and that prudence which seems to control his every sentiment, secures him the undivided respect and esteem of all who know him; while that high and lofty tone of feeling which carries him above the little tricks of political manœuvres, excites the cary and the ire of small folks.

Mr. Calhoun might properly be called the strongest pillar of the republic. He seeks to control no sentiment—appears to feel no animosity towards those who traduce and abuse him; but seems carried entirely above all the political or private persecution that may be directed at him. He is perhaps the plainest man in the city. While others, who may never arrive at half his eminence, are dashing in their carriages; you may see Calhoun, wrapt in an old cloak, trudging on to the capitol, through weed and mire, not appearing to know whether he is in sunshine or storm.

Since the injection of Martin Van Buren, the people of this place, or rather the members of congress, appear to be peculiarly sensitive. Three or four duels have been expected. Indeed some two or three gentlemen, Mr. Wickliffe particularly, tried very hard to get a fight. Within a day or two, public feeling has been a good deal excited by an occurrence which took place in the house of representatives between Messrs. Branch and White. Some very personal remarks were made, a good deal of angry feeling was manifested, and it was yesterday reported, that they had gone out of town to settle the matter. This report, however, was not true.

There no doubt will be something done, for they are both men of determined courage, and both are implicated in dishonor, but the perpetual rattling with which we are troubled, will prevent it yet, for no one, I suspect, would like to stand in the rain to be shot at, much less shot down in the mud. And here, I think, I may point you to an evidence of the corruption and mischief which appears to be involving the destinies of the nation in doubt and uncertainty. Our men of high authority cannot meet together at the great council fire of the nation, without their personal feelings being disturbed, and their political interests touched; and the nation's interests must be neglected while we settle our personal difficulties at the pistol's mouth. We are every day unfolding the vices of each other, and every day discovering new springs of corruption—and we are every day neglecting the sound weal, for the base purposes of party, or personal and political favoritism. You may see in all the affairs of the government—in all the offices, and all the institutions, the spirit of personal detraction and political advancement, pervading the whole body, and when I look at the probable consequence of this much to be lamented situation of things, I fear that glorious sun of liberty, which rose and beamed so brightly on us, more than half a century ago, is destined, at a day not very distant, to sink below a dreary horizon—and long, long and dreary will be the years, the ages, which will roll, before another sun of liberty shall rise, to dash away the gloomy vista which will hover round the land once trod by freemen—once hallowed with patriotic blood.

In the House, yesterday, Mr. M'Duffie made a great speech on the Bank question. It is thought that notwithstanding the opposition to that institution, it will be chartered with certain modifications.

I hope the Tariff will be modified and equalized. If the tariff men do not give way, and meet the Southern men on equal grounds, I have no idea that the South will ever be represented in Congress again. They will separate from the Union at once, and then, farewell to liberty.

The President's health appears to be evidently on the decline. I saw him a day or two since, and he was certainly feeble.

The Vice Presidency excites a great degree of interest with us. The President requests that Van Buren shall be nominated at Baltimore. If that is done, we shall have an excited election, and the cause of President will devolve on Congress.

Extract of a letter to the Editor, dated

Mobile, Feb. 17, 1832.

Dear Sir—There is no little excitement here this morning in consequence of the very sudden deaths of five young students. Some say they died of the East Indian Cholera; others that the disease is the cold plague. With one of the deceased I was well acquainted; he was a fine young fellow, universally beloved. He was taken about six o'clock yesterday morning, and died about ten last evening. The doctors pronounced the disease the bilious cholic. I do not feel very pleasant under the circumstances, but should I be assured that any danger exists, I shall leave this place forthwith. I think if the Cholera does get into the [illegible] we shall be completely arriving, and we have no quarantine regulations. Your's, &c.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At a meeting of the Council of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, held on the 17th of February, the following premiums were awarded for fruits and vegetables exhibited to the Society during the past year—

The premium of two dollars, for the best Early Cabbage—to David Field.

The premium of two dollars, for the best Tomato—to Adam Price, of Burlington, N. J.

The premium of two dollars, for the best Artichokes—to the Gardener of J. J. Boise.

The premium of three dollars, for the best Cauliflowers—to James Oldham, the Gardener of George Pepper.

The premium of three dollars, for the best Strawberries—to Robert Scott.

The premium of two dollars, for the best Early Potatoes—to Jacob Engleman.

A premium of two dollars, for the best Early Cucumbers—to the Gardener of Joshua Longstreth.

The premium of three dollars, for the best Foreign Grapes—to Mrs. Elizabeth Spohn.

The premium of three dollars, for the best Native Grapes—to Aaron Quicksall, of Burlington, N. J. They were of the Elsinborough variety, and decidedly superior to any American Grape the Committee had ever tasted.

An honorary premium of two dollars, for Native Grapes—to Edward H. Bonsall, of Germantown.

The premium of three dollars, for the best Pears—to Samuel Davis, of Haverford Township.

An honorary premium of two dollars, for Pears—to J. B. Smith.

An honorary premium of two dollars, for Quinces—to Jacob Copia.

The premium of ten dollars, offered by the Society in April, 1829, "for the greatest quantity and best quality of Sea Kale, to be exhibited in the Philadelphia market in the year 1831"—to Alexander Parker. C. PICKERING,
Rec. Secretary.

A gentleman who witnessed the Procession on Wednesday, states that the left or rear passed the corner of Sixth and Coates' street at 35 minutes past 3 o'clock. At 10 minutes past 3 o'clock the front or head of the procession passed the Coffee House. The distance, then, from Coates' and Sixth, by the course of the procession to Chesnut st. is as follows:

From Coates' and 6th to Callowhill,	2000 feet
" Callowhill up to 9th,	1350 do.
" 9th and Callowhill down to Arch,	1900 do.
" 9th and Arch up to 12th,	1275 do.
" 12th and Arch down to Chesnut,	1300 do.
" 12th and Chesnut down to 8th,	1900 do.
" 8th and Chesnut down to Walnut,	550 do.
" 8th and Walnut down to 5th,	1350 do.
" 5th and Walnut down to Christian,	3750 do.
" 5th and Christian down to 3d,	1450 do.
" 3d and Christian up to Chesnut,	4420 do.
	21,175 ft.

Equal to 4 miles and 55 feet.

On Monday, the House of Representatives at Harrisburg, in Committee of the whole, passed the appropriating sections of the improvement bill. The Intelligencer says:—

Mr. Heston's amendment making specific appropriations instead of one undivided sum for the completion of the works under contract, carried by a considerable majority. An ineffectual attempt was made to appropriate something like 97,000 dollars to the south western turnpikes, but an additional appropriation was inserted, appropriating 15,000 dollars to connect the north end or feeder with French creek, and 25,000 dollars to connect the west end with Conneut Lake. The following appropriations for extensions were stricken out.

West Branch Canal	60,000
North Branch Canal	140,000
Monongahela slack water	75,000
French creek Canal	100,000
Beaver Canal	100,000
	675,000

The following are the appropriations in the bill as it now stands, having passed through the committee of the whole.

Philada. and Columbia Rail Road	816,000
Canal from Middletown and Conoy	30,000
Rail Road over the Alleghany	620,000
Juniata Canal	300,000
Beaver Canal	245,000
West Branch Canal	350,000
French creek Canal	215,000
Rail Road over the Allegheny	41,000
North Branch Canal	127,000
For Repairs and Damages	300,000
	$3,136,000

CITY POLICE.

Reported for the Saturday Evening Post.

Monday, Feb. 27.

Mr. Anthony, a respectable inhabitant the Recorder, (sitting in the absence of the Mayor) that he had seen boys on last evening, to every appearance young men, who had been guilty of riotous behaviour, in an oyster cellar, in Market near Thirteenth.

Young, the keeper of the oyster cellar, deposed that the prisoners entered his cellar, with the opposite, though of course not avowed purpose, of doing mischief. They asked for something to eat; but he refused to give it them, as he anticipated they had no wish to pay. Suddenly they all in their coats, and commenced smashing, and at such a furious rate, that the cellar was quickly full of casks. He remonstrated, but they smashed the more, and even whilst the smoke immediately under deponent's nose. Deponent said it was a shame to disturb a quiet citizen in this way, and begged them to go out of his cellar peaceably—but they would not. He then threatened them with a prosecution, to which one of the prisoners replied, that he had five hundred dollars to spare in a lawsuit. Finally the prisoners seized hold of all his movables and threw them on the floor; they then ran up the stairs, and smashed through the door, breaking every light of glass in it.

The prisoners had many excuses to offer, but none calculated to exculpate them from these charges. None were willing to swear the mischief to exclusively him, consequently all were bound over in the sum of five hundred dollars, to answer a charge of riot at the next Mayor's Court.

One of the prisoners, when this business was settled, had a charge against Young of keeping a bawdy house, and another that he had sold liquor by the small without proper license. To sustain the first charge, a young gentleman, not connected with this prosecution, offered his testimony; and to prove the latter, a boy was produced who made oath that he had purchased liquor of Young, at the rate of three cents per glass.

Young was also bound over to Court, in heavy bail, to answer these imputations.

Hugh Poe, a city constable, arrested a man last evening, having in his possession a lot of wet clothes, apparently just taken from a line, which he had been offering for sale. The bundle contained various aprons, ruffles, capes, &c., some of them marked "E. R." The prisoner, John Girvin, said he had obtained them from one Peggy Osborn, who requested him to sell them, and pay over the proceeds to her. The story being improbable and unsatisfactory, he was committed until the matter could be more fully investigated.

A Mr. Matthews, a Frenchman, utterly unable to articulate a word in our vocabulary, was brought up under a charge of intoxication. He had been found fast asleep in Filbert street. When asked the cause of this strange behaviour, he motioned that he had drank too much wine. He was fined and discharged.

Tuesday.—One of the western watchmen, while standing before his box, between 12 and 1 o'clock this morning, was informed by three countrymen, that a suspicious looking personage was prowling about their wagons in Market street; the watchman stepped over and found the prisoner examining the jewelry in several horses. Deponent asked prisoner's name, and he replied, "Major Fullerton, of the Pennsylvania Militia." Deponent asked the countrymen if they had any charge to allege against the Major, and they answered, "no, but if he would go about his business the watchman might let him go." The case back again they said they would horsewhip him.

The Major accordingly walked off, but in the course of an hour, he was observed dogging about the same place. The watchman, therefore thought proper to arrest him.

When before the Recorder, the Major stated that he arrived in the city last evening; that he stopped in a tavern, and took some refreshment, and then started off, to look for a boiling place, which he found some difficulty in finding. He had left Lancaster, he said, about three days ago. His regular residence is with his parents, near Columbia, in this State, where he follows farming. Being closely questioned, the Major appeared much confused, and either unwilling or unable to give a correct account of himself. He was detained for further examination, as a notice had been received from the Sheriff of Lancaster county, informing the police of this city, that eleven persons had escaped from the Lancaster jail, on the 23d ult. and he was presumed to be one of them.

Wednesday.—Captain Berger brought up this morning, a young girl, who had been committed to his care the evening previous, by several ladies in the vicinity of Sixth and Market streets. She stated that her name is Ann Fisher, and related to the Recorder the following circumstances:

As she was going from her work, about nine o'clock last evening, to her residence in College Avenue, she was accosted by a genteelly dressed man, who asked if he might accompany her. The girl made no reply, until he asked the question for the fourth time, when she desired him to let her pass unmolested. He persisted, however, in his intrusion, and at length took hold of her arm, and forced her along, in another direction from that she was going, in Sixth street. A few doors above Race, he endeavored to drag her into a strange house. Here she struggled violently to release herself from him; and some ladies observing the movement, came to her assistance, and the man ran away.

The Recorder placed her in the custody of a watchman to be taken home.

When the watchman returned, it was ascertained that the principal part of Ann's story was a fabricated one—Her mother's residence was not in College Avenue, but somewhere in Seventh street. She had, it appeared, recently been discharged from the service of a respectable family, in consequence of her conduct. Her mother, who at the bar, [illegible] Recorder to place her in the House of Refuge. The Recorder strongly admonished the girl on the impropriety of her conduct, and intimated that if he heard further complaints, she should be placed in custody.]

A watchman in whose beat is located the neighborhood of Fourth and Market street, deposed that on the morning of the 23d ult. as he was passing Mr. Hartley's paper warehouse, he discovered a light in the cellar. Looking through the window he noticed a huge black fellow mustering about, as if seeking for something to lay his hands upon. He called to him, but on the instant the light was extinguished. Being rather alarmed that all was not right, he sprung his rattle, and proceeded up the alley, where, from a back entrance into the cellar, he found the black fellow crawling out.

The springing of the rattle awakened Mr. Hartley, who, upon coming down, recognised the prisoner as one of several individuals he had employed the day before to clean his mat.

Davis, the black fellow, acknowledged he had no business in the cellar, though he strongly protested he had no idea of stealing. The Recorder thought that assertion exceedingly doubtful, and the prisoner was committed.

Frowart, a watchman, stated that about 12 o'clock, the night previous, he met three shabby dressed men, in a glorious state of intoxication. Thinking their movements suspicious, he watched, and at length saw them enter an untenanted building in Water street near Walnut. In a short time after, he went in also, and found them rolling about the floor, which was strewed over with ilth to the depth of several inches. He arrested them as vagrants.

Two young men were found quarrelling at the corner of Ninth and Spruce street, as a watchman was passing, about 12 o'clock. One held an umbrella, which the other claimed as his property. The watchman tried, but in vain, to settle the difference, and finally took them both to the watch-house. In the morning, Purdy, the one who insisted upon retaining the umbrella, and, in consequence of the sweet weaning his hat slouched over his eye, he did not recognise him. They were both fined for intoxication.

Thursday.—Moses Custy, a lusty black fellow, was brought before the Recorder, this morning, for an assault and battery committed upon the person of Rachel Thompson, his wife. The complainant stated that Moses was in the habit of coming to see her and his children occasionally, when he was doing his work, the lived out at service) on which occasions she generally gave him something to eat, in the shape of a nice pie, and a glass of switchel—Last evening he came home as usual, but as she intended going out to work in the morning, she had nothing of the sort to give him, as she must leave all her provisions for her children. Moses liked not the disappointment, as his greedy appetite had been feeding, in anticipation, upon some delicious rarity, and he told Miller, that in truth he must have something. So he went straight to the provision closet, and commenced a search. Miller followed, and insisted that she was the mistress of her own house, and that Moses should not do as he pleased. Moses, then, in a fit of exasperation, put his dear and affectionate wife, Mrs. Miller Thompson, out into the street.

Miss Anna Maria Thompson, daughter of Mrs. Miller Thompson by a former husband, being called upon for her testimony, stepped up to the bar with the trepidation natural to a novice in a court of law, and after several essays, declared, in a style superlatively affected, that Moses was a very bad man indeed; he abused her terribly, and said bad words, very revolting to a delicate ear. He called her—(the most amiable creature this side the moon, and the most affectionate in existence)—a common nuisance, and a scoundrel. Her mortifying sensations at his low ways, completely, at times, overpowered her weak nerves, and she had, on more than one occasion, absolutely fainted with affright. She begged the Recorder to chide Moses severely for his rude behaviour.

Moses had great difficulty in keeping his tongue still while these things were said of him. At length, when the field was cleared, he commenced a speech, and for about fifteen minutes, he ran off in a lucid style, narrating the events of his life, for the past twenty years. We were able to understand an occasional word, and from the whole tenor of his discourse, we infer he wished to say something of this sort:—

That Mrs. Moses Miller Thompson, was a woman no better than she should be, and that Miss Anna Maria Thompson was an affected young lady, who never knew nothing and always did; that Mrs Thompson was provided for by deponent's labor, and that she very ungeneriously fed her own children from the food provided for the children of Moses; that Miss Thompson effected a lady-like demeanor when in genteel company; but that Miss Thompson, when at home, was quite another Miss Thompson, and a Miss Thompson that could, and did say as many ugly words as any she-nigger in the country, &c.

The Recorder gave Moses, and the varties, a severe lecture, and threatened, in case any further complaints were were made, to commit the whole posse to prison.

Education in Baltimore.—It appears by a debate in the Maryland legislature, there are 14,297 children in Baltimore between the age of 5 and 15. There are 175 schools in Baltimore, but yet it is calculated that over 500 children are destitute of uniform or regular instruction. In spite of the evidence showing the deficiency in public instruction in various parts of the Union, there is yet a class of men who are eternally collecting money to send to foreign countries under the pretence of instructing the ignorant. Vide the letters, papers, and meetings put forth by the "Fudge Family" of Greece, in relation to school and colleges on Mars Hill at Athens, &c.

From the Baltimore Intelligencer.

TRIAL OF MRS. CHAPMAN.

On Saturday night last, about eleven o'clock, Lucretia Chapman, alias Mann, was acquitted of the charge of murdering her late husband, William Chapman. This was the result of a most arduous, but deliberate investigation of eleven days. The Court set on an average eight hours a day; on the last day, more than eleven hours. In noticing the result and a few of the incidents of this highly interesting trial, we have no intention to infringe upon the strict rule of the Court, which is, that no publication shall be made of the facts and evidence disclosed until after the trial of Mann, which will not take place until the 23d day of April next. Appreciating, as we do, the reason of the rule, we shall not, however unwelcome it may prove to the eager curiosity of the public, transcend the limits which authority and exact justice impose upon us, by exposing in print, any statement which may affect the chance of a fair trial for the Spaniard. Reporters at the tables in Court, who had come prepared to spread abroad the proceedings through the Philadelphia newspapers, were required to be vouched for by counsel; so that every precaution, within the power of the Court, has been used to prevent any dissemination of the evidence; and for the obvious and simple reason, that it would affect the rights of the remaining prisoner.

We may, however, undertake to say, that a more extraordinary history has not for very long time, come to the ears of the people. It may well be said, that "Truth is stranger than Fiction." No writer of romance, however bold, and extravagant, has ventured to string together a chain of occurrences so improbable; no historian has recorded events more authentic. With all the light of evidence, of scientific research, of unwearied scrutiny, there is still a mystery hanging, like the thick darkness of Egypt, upon those parts of the transaction which it was emphatically the province of the ministers of justice to ferret out.

Nearly thirty witnesses for the prosecution, and about fifteen for the defendant, were examined. The evidence was closed on Friday, and in the afternoon of that day's session, Mr. Reed addressed the Jury in a speech of four hours in length, enforcing, in a manner, which gained him high credit and applause, the strong points of the prosecution. His allusion to the children of the prisoner, who had been, during great part of the trial, sitting at her side in the box, was exceedingly well chosen and effective. He drew from the page of history, as a parallel for their affecting situation, an anecdote, in which little children were represented to have offered up their supplications, to beseech for that mercy from the Deity, which their guilty parents dared not ask for.

He was followed in the morning of Saturday, by Mr. M'Call, in a speech of three hours for the prisoner. He spared no pains to fulfil every point of his duty to his client, and acquitted himself as a successful pleader. Mr. Brown spoke four hours, and Mr. Ross two hours and a half. Our object is not to heap compliments upon counsel, and we will therefore only say, that the fame of the former named gentleman for energy and eloquence was fully sustained; and our Prosecuting Attorney consummated that persevering zeal and determination which he has abundantly manifested ever since the first suspicion of the murder.

Judge Fox summed up the whole case on Saturday evening, in a charge of somewhat less than two hours length. What his views were, it would of course, be improper for us to intimate. The verdict, which was returned a few minutes past eleven, after two hours absence of the Jury, was Not Guilty. Mrs. Chapman was then discharged by proclamation, and she returned to her former residence on Sunday. On Tuesday evening and Wednesday morning, Mina's trial, after argument by Bush for the prisoner, and Ross for the Commonwealth, was postponed until next Court—mainly on the ground of the publication of a letter signed by Lucretia Chapman, which was copied by the Republican of this village from the Boston Morning Post.—Upon the postponement of Mina's trial to the next term, the Court took occasion to renew, at its former injunction, inhibiting the publication of any of the evidence which had been introduced in the trial of Mrs. Chapman, or any comments thereupon tending in any way to prejudice the Mina's trial. Himself from the power of his authority, and suggested to the counsel of Mina, how far a publication in a Philadelphia paper, and sent into this County, would render the publisher liable to this Court.

The evidence of Drs. Mitchell, Hopkinson, Togno, and Mr. Clemson, (a distinguished chemist, was of a most interesting character, not only as connected with this trial, but as important illustrations in medical jurisprudence. Col. Da Cuesta, the Mexican Consul, resident at Philadelphia, attended as a witness on the part of Mrs. Chapman, and gave a full account of the visits and transactions of Mina and Mrs. C. at his office, and in his house. The dignified deportment and amiable manner of this gentleman were his ready passports to the esteem of all who became in any degree known to him, and we would vouch for the same favorable impressions upon all who attended during his examination. He was on the stand about four hours.

From the Cincinnati American—Extra.

THE FLOOD.

Thursday Morning, Feb. 16.—The river "still continues on the rise." It is undoubtedly 64 feet above low water mark. Yesterday it rose at the rate of an inch an hour. From 6 o'clock last evening to 6 this morning, we should think at the rate of an inch and a half an hour. The Amulet from above reports we may expect from 12 to 16 inches more. It was falling above the Great Kenawha, and was at a stand below. It rose several inches while the boat was at Maysville. We should hope the above may not be correct, for the scene already presented is distressing, but we understand a foot is the least estimate.—This morning it continues to rise at the rate of an inch per hour.

We took a boat in company with a number of others yesterday afternoon, and rowed to the lower part of the city. The scene presented cannot easily be described. It was painful to witness destruction on so vast a scale. Some houses upset—others in imminent danger. The water reached the roofs of the more humble, and the windows of the second stories of good frame houses. Flat boats loaded with women and children, furniture and live stock. Race, Vine, Elm, and Walnut, busy with the moveables. The paper mills appeared to be in the middle of the river, if river it can be called. Skiffs were passing in every direction. We returned via Front street. The fine houses flooded, the lower part of the street quite deserted, and the second stories occupied of those nearer Maine—but loads of furniture from Water street formed a melancholy foul ensemble. The conflagration of a few houses is sure to awaken the sympathies of the benevolent, and call for timely relief. But we cannot stay the flood of waters, nor can we hope to afford such assistance to the hundreds deprived of house and home, as to alleviate entirely their severe misfortunes. Committees, however, appointed at the late public meetings, are on the alert—let every hand be open to give. The committee of vigilance can be found, at all times, at the Council Chamber, on Fourth, between Maine and Walnut streets, for the purpose of affording relief.

Two of the workmen at Titt's foundry were drowned last night. They ran down the cellar at the time the embankment gave way, to save, perhaps, some of the effects—the water rushed in with such fury as to render escape impossible. There is a report of two or three children being secured from a floating log cabin, but we cannot trace it to any authentic source.

Friday Morning, Feb. 17.—The work of desolation still continues—the river having reached nearly to lower Market street. Our "composing" room is about a square from the publishing office. When we issued the first circular, no one presumed it would reach much further than Columbia—but all calculations have failed—"it is still on the rise, it is still on the rise," is all that is said or known. The boatmen are crying beneath our windows, "twelve and a half cents to the mouth of Maine street." Every kind of craft is put in requisition, tubs, boxes, canoes, flats, dugouts, skiffs, yawls, &c. &c. The scene is as lively as the regatta of Venice, though we may not boast of a Bravo or Antonio. We ought to except a baker, who manages his trough with wonderful dexterity.

We cannot enumerate half of the sad calamities rumour is bringing in. The river, as it sweeps past with its accumulated waters, carries with it the wreck of its desolation. A church passed the city with its steeple, bound for New Orleans we presume; a poor market. Excellent frame houses float along, with hay stacks, rails, leaving the farms strip of every vestige of cultivation. The lower Mill Creek bridge started yesterday morning. Hamilton, and Colerain bridges have also floated off, and the bridge over White River in Kentucky. The Kentucky river had backed up as far as Frankfort, 64 miles above its mouth. The Cumberland and the Tennessee were both very high.

We should think the water at this time (Friday Evening) nearly at its height—rising this morning about one half of an inch an hour. We have but little to add to the above. From the "look out" at the Commercial Hotel, corner of Broadway and Front, we had an excellent prospect of "Cincinnati as it is." The waste of waters! The suburbs East and West, with the lower part of the City, as far as Lower Market, the cellars of which are filled with water, were navigable in every direction. Newport opposite to this city, was pretty well afloat—the water reaching nearly to the windows in the second story of the United States Arsenal. Covington does better—some dry land being yet discernible.

The bridges at Dayton and Miamisburgh are seriously injured. The embankments at the former place answered well—no inundation. There are reports of a dreadful flood at New Orleans—probably without foundation. The only lives lost, besides those already mentioned, are two Negroes in the Eastern suburbs.

Charge of Murder.—The mate of the Brig Triton, which arrived here on Monday last from Gunyama, was apprehended yesterday on a warrant issued by the Judge of the U. S. District Court, charging him with the murder of one of the crew on the high seas, on the outward voyage of the brig, the next day after she left this port. The information was given by the crew. The substance of the charge is, that the deceased was assaulted by the mate while the captain was in the cabin, and after being severely beaten with a rope's end, was ordered to go aloft and adjust some of the rigging. While he was engaged in that duty, the mate ascended the rigmarole, and again struck him several times, with such violence, that he fell into the sea, and was drowned. The name of the mate is Thomas Soule. The name of the deceased was Phelps. The accused underwent an examination this morning, before Judge Betts, by whom he was fully committed for trial. Four of the crew appeared as witnesses against him. [The ex-parte preliminary testimony of witnesses should always be received with some grains of allowance.]—N. Y. Jour. Com.

Deliberate Murder.—The Alabama Republican, published at Cahawba, Alabama, has the following under date of the 13th ult:—"A slight quarrel took place on Saturday, the 4th ult. between Thomas Pearson and J. W. M'Kinnie, both residents of this county. M'Kinnie was in the habit of peddling, and set off after the quarrel for a round in the neighbourhood—on his return home, to his uncle, Kincher M'Kinnie's, in the afternoon, he had to pass by Pearson's. We understand whilst passing by, in his wagon, Pearson shot him with buck shot through the abdomen, and he expired in about an hour and a half. Pearson has made his escape."

A young lady named Hannah Rice, residing at Swanton Falls, Vt. put an end to her existence on the 13th instant, by drowning herself. It seems that she had been for some time in a delicate state of health, and was subject to extreme depression of spirits. She left the house of her brother on the evening of the above day, and after being absent about an hour, her friends became alarmed, and commenced a search for her. She was found by her trucks in the snow to the river, where her corpse was discovered, the water being only about twenty inches deep. Her parents reside in this state. Miss Rice is represented to have been a very interesting young lady, and was about 20 years of age.

The Virginia House of Delegates have passed the bill making appropriations for the removal of free negroes from that State by a vote of 70 to [illegible]. It appropriates $25,000 for the present year, and 90,000 for 1833, besides 10,000 for a temporary shelter at Liberia. This is the first time that any member of our Confederacy, coming fairly within the list of slave-holding States, has commenced a series of efforts designed eventually to free itself from the curse of slavery. It is an act which reflects great honour upon Virginia, and cannot fail to exert a powerful influence upon other States. The spirit of the community will now be turned to Maryland. Is she prepared to emulate so noble an example?

Wreck.—The Elkton (Md.) Press of Saturday last says—"A man calling himself Thomas Benson, came into our office on Tuesday last, and made the following statement, viz: That the schooner Float, of which vessel he was master, from Vienna bound to Philadelphia, was cast away on the Saturday night previous, between Wirten Point and Howell's Point, by running foul of a large log of wood, which split her completely open. Benson and another man, who was the only persons on board at the time of the accident, escaped in the boat, in which they arrived here on Wednesday evening."

A man named Caleb Baldwin, about 45 years of age, was found dead on Sunday morning last, in the canal, at the bridge, in Washington street, Newark, N. J. It is supposed that he fell off the steps at the bridge, the night before, while in a state of intoxication, as he was found with his face partly buried in the ice. The body was examined by a coroner, who being satisfied that his death was accidental, delivered it to his friends.

At Harrisburgh, on Friday, the House of Representatives negatived the bill authorising the Courts to incorporate Boroughs and Fire Companies; and passed that for a temporary loan of $75,000 for expenses and repairs of the Pennsylvania Canal.

The committee on the charges against Judge Ross of the Supreme Court, reported against the petitioners and was discharged.

The committee of the whole reported the bill authorizing the Corporation of Philadelphia to effect certain improvements according to Mr. Girard's will.

From the Washington Globe of Monday.

CONGRESSIONAL ANALYSIS.

In the House of Representatives, Mr. Adams submitted a resolution calling on the President for a copy of the instructions to the agent who negotiated the treaty with the Sublime Porte. The resolutions submitted by Mr. Branch on the 23d instant, calling on the Secretary of the Navy for information respecting the live oak on the public lands in Florida, &c. were taken up. Mr. White of Florida, offered amendments proposing to extend the enquiry.

A discussion of an acrimonious and personal character occurred, between Messrs. Branch and White. The amendments were finally modified by the mover at the instance of Mr. Branch, and, together with the original resolutions, were agreed to by the House. The bill granting letters patent for useful discoveries to certain aliens, was passed. The House resumed, in Committee of the Whole, the consideration of the bill for the relief of Susan Decatur, et al.

The amendment proposed by Mr. Pearce, in favor of the nieces of Commodore Decatur, was further discussed by Messrs. E. Everett, Watmough, Rencher, McDuffie, Anderson and Pearce. The amendment was rejected. A motion was then made to strike out the enacting clause of the bill; before the question was taken, the Committee, at the instance of Mr. Davis, of Massachusetts, rose, reported progress, and the House adjourned.

At the celebration of the Centennial Anniversary at Reading, Pa., about 1 P. M. in the rapid discharge of artillery, at the first crossing in South Calkowhill street, by some unforeseen accident, a premature explosion of one of the pieces took place, whilst two of the bombardiers of the Grays were in the act of ramming home cartridge. The rammer passed through their hands, considerably mutilating the skin and flesh in the palm of each, but we are happy in being able to state, upon good authority, that the injury sustained is not likely to be attended with serious consequences. The names of the wounded are Edward Jackson and Amos Phillippi, two very industrious and amiable young gentlemen.

Foreign Intelligence.

[From late New York Papers.]

THREE DAYS LATER FROM ENGLAND.

The ship Eagle has arrived at this port, from Liverpool, whence she sailed on the 14th of January. Her London advices include the morning papers of that capital, of the 13th, being a day and a half later than our former advices, which were to the evening of the 11th inclusive, by the way of Paris. There is of course no news from France.

The Cholera.—Jan.

THE MARKETS.

WHOLESALE PRICES CURRENT.

FLOUR, per bbl. fresh from wagons... $4 [illegible]
do. do. do. ... [illegible]
WHEAT, per bushel... [illegible]
do. do. ... [illegible]
RYE, per bushel... [illegible]
CORN, per bushel... [illegible]
CLOVER SEED, per bushel... 5 50
TIMOTHY SEED, do... 2 25
FLAX SEED, do... 2 75
BEEF, Cargo, Good, do... 1 00
BEEF, Mess, do... 1 75
PORK, Clear, per barrel... 45
WHISKEY, do. per gallon, in bbls... [illegible]
do. do. do. in hhds... [illegible]
BUTTER, per lb... [illegible]
BUTTER, No. 1, in kegs, per lb... 10
EGGS, per dozen... 15
SALT, Ground, per bushel... [illegible]
do. fine do... [illegible]
LARD, per lb. Western... [illegible]
TALLOW, do... 8
HAMS, Western, per lb... 10
BACON, do. do... 7
SHOULDERS, do. do... 19
SPERM OIL, do. do... 58
WHALE OIL, do. do... [illegible]
FEATHERS, do. do... 40
HIDES, Rio Grande and La Plata, per lb... 17 to 19
LEATHER, SOLE... 24 to 26
AMERICAN WOOL, washed... [illegible]

Corrected for the Saturday Evening Post, every Friday, by J. & H. WITMER, Merchants, No. 241 Market street.

THE MARKET.—We note a further reduction on the price of Superfine Flour, upwards of 3000 barrels having been sold on Monday at five dollars. The late advices from Europe, received yesterday, had not affected the market, as holders were willing to sell at that price. The price from Wagons is nearly at $5. 75. Very little doing in Rye Flour, further than what is stated in Corn Meal in barrels; a sale has been made at $2.45. A cargo of Southern Wheat sold at 108 cents; Yellow Corn at 47 cents; Oats at 34½ cts. and Flaxseed at $1.75, afloat. Sales of Whiskey from store in barrels at 30 cents, bbls. dull at 29. Sales of Clover Seed at former prices, 56 paid for prime lots only. Very little doing in other articles, and no change in prices.

THE NEW YORK MARKET, Feb. 29.—Money affairs are much easier than last week. Dry goods sell better. Cotton and Coffee are quiet. The prices of Flour at the close of the week are hardly sustained. The Susan Mary's cargo of Hides from Buenos Ayres has been sold, chiefly at 13 cents, 6 and 6 mos. The following are the particulars of the present stock of hides, taken with same care. In first hands, Feb. 28th: Pernambuco 10,300; Rio Grande 18,800; Russia 3,900; West India 3,000; Mocha 4,000; Mexican 2,800; Calcutta 16,000; Valparaiso 3,000; California 14,000.—Total 92,900.—Jour. Com.

LONDON MARKETS, Feb. 13.—Foreign Sugars.—By private contract there has scarcely been any business done. The day's public sale 153 chests, 11 barrels, Havana Sugar sold with brickness, 1s to 1s 6d higher: good to fine white 30s a 34s 6d; 34 chests Brazil sold, yellow 21s a 23s, brown 17s a 17s 6d. The coffee market has been very dull all the week, and where sales were effected the prices were lower. In some fine ordinary St. Domingo sold at 56s. The Tallow Market has been very firm at rather an improving currency. In Fine or Stamp there is little variation. The Market in the north was brisk, and very firm prices. The Cotton Market is more firm. Tobacco.—The only late purchases are 200 hhds. Kentucky, delivered at a near post at 22s, and about 130 hhds. for Ireland. Ashes have fallen considerably; Pot and Pearl nominally about 32s. Rice is more firm.

Sales of Public Stocks, in this City,
DURING THE PAST WEEK.

		Par	Price
$1,500	Commonwealth and Delaware Canal Scrip, redeemable in 1897 at 107	100
1 shares	Bank of the United States	125	100
1 do.	Bank of North America	432	190
41 do.	Philadelphia Bank	112	100
10 do.	Schuylkill do.	50	50
1 do.	Southwark Bank	814	38
10 do.	Delaware & Raritan Canal	16	50
5 do.	Philadelphia, Germantown, and Norristown Rail Road	10	25

Furnished by Solomons Lehman, Stock and Exchange Broker, No. 44 South Third Street.

New agents for the S. E. Post and Casket.

Batavia, N. Y. ..... Wm. Mallory.
Georgetown, S. C. ..... E. B. Rothmahler, Esq. P. M.
Newport, R. I. ..... Thos. Coggeshall, Jr.
Bacon's Castle, Va. ..... B. Coche, Esq. P. M.
St. Albans, Vt. ..... C. Whiting, Assist'n P. M.
Sandusky City, Ohio ..... Erastus Cooke, Esq. P. M.
Watson's Coweta co. Ga. ..... Thos. Watson, Esq. P. M.
Warrenton, Va. ..... J. P. Kemper, Deputy P. M.
White Hill, S. C. ..... Lipscomb & Barker.
Fayette, Mo. ..... John Nauson, Esq.

AVERSON'S SATURDAY EVENING POST.

PHILADELPHIA:
Saturday, March 3, 1832.

To Readers and Correspondents.

The article on Napoleon came safely to hand.

The position Erasmus in our last paper has been answered by several correspondents. We insert the best on our second page.

The shortcut of Julian's articles shall be inserted soon—room for the other we cannot procure at this time.

Some grandiose booby has sent us, as original, an old patched up, miserable story of a Pirate, and attached thereto a lady's signature. If we can detect him, we shall hand him over to the blue stocking society for punishment.

Tom Cobbler, we feel disposed to use our female correspondents with all possible courtesy—Julia will meet prompt attention.

"The voice of Spring," is on file.

The articles from Irene, we feel compelled to reject.

"The Grecian Boy's Appeal," is under consideration.

It is stated in a London paper, that the private secretary of M. Casimir Perier has brought an action against the Tribune newspaper, for asserting that he had received a kick from M. Perier. The trial is expected to be a very curious one. The secretary lays his damages high, but it is supposed that if he recover any they will be trifling. C. Perier himself, and one of his colleagues, sometime ago brought an action against an Editor, who accused them of taking an enormous bribe; the damage awarded to their excellencies was twenty-five francs each.

The plane making establishment in Lilly Alley, near Green street, occupied by Mr. Jones, was destroyed by fire last Friday evening. Considerable loss in tools, materials, &c. was sustained by the proprietor. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

The alarm of fire on Monday morning, was occasioned by the partial burning of Mr. Thomas Owen's cabinet ware and Venitian blind making establishment, in Sixth street, near the corner of Arch. The fire caught from the stove pipe, while the hands were at breakfast. The loss is not heavy.

Messrs. Huger & Pell's type foundry, New York, was destroyed by fire, on Thursday evening of last week. Damage to the amount of $10,000 was sustained. The contents of the building were partially insured.

On Saturday morning last, a destructive fire broke out in a frame building, in Catherine Lane, N. York. About sixteen dwellings were consumed, generally the residences of depraved characters.

Soon after the above, a fire broke out in a grocery store, corner of Duane and Rose street, which was not extinguished until that and two adjoining dwellings were destroyed.

D. & W. Silkman's hat manufactory, in West Chester county, N. York, was destroyed by fire on the 5th ult. under circumstances which created strong suspicions that it was the work of an incendiary. A developement has since been made which has led to the arrest of four young men in that county, and their committal to prison to take their trial upon the charge. One of the Messrs. S. resides in New York, and is the same individual against whom the conspiracy was formed, for the purpose of sending him to Prison. The destruction of his property, appears to have been a part of the original plan, it being the design of the gang to strip him of his worldly goods, as well as his good name.

A fire broke out in Mr. Snelling's tailor shop, Boston, one evening last week. Immediately above was the office of the Boston Evening Gazette, which was trifingly injured. The Napier Press upon which the paper is worked sustained some damage.

The members of the Boston Engine company, No. 8, have formed themselves into a Temperance Society, and have agreed to drink nothing stronger than hot coffee or chocolate.

DIFFICULTIES AT WASHINGTON.

The daily papers of the past week have teemed with the correspondence growing out of a dispute between certain Senators and Congressmen at Washington, in connection with the recent rejection of Mr. Van Buren. Several challenges have passed between the parties, but owing to some technical difficulties, made by one and another, no hostile meeting has yet taken place. The proceedings are infinitely discreditable to all the parties implicated. It is lamentable to reflect that the highest officers of our government countenance, encourage and practice that most barbarous feudal custom, dueling—a custom condemned, unhesitatingly, by every moral member of the community. It is to be regretted that our laws are not more severe against this practice. Were it in our power, we would have every person engaged in a duel, either as principal or second, not only ineligible to public office, but scouted from decent society.

The cause of contention appears to have arisen from a publication in the New York Courier, charging Mr. Poindexter, of Mississipi, and Gov. Moore, of Alabama, with underhand dealings, in procuring a letter from Samuel E. Clement, relating a conversation which took place between the writer and Mr. Van Buren, and with having advanced money to said Clement, to establish a newspaper in the Western States. To a card, repeating these insinuations, Col. Webb replied, that three members of the New York Delegation, were responsible for the offensive statement.

Shortly after, on the 13th of Feb. Mr. Poindexter addressed a letter to Mr. Bergen, one of the New York Delegation, asking if he were one of the members of Congress alluded to, and directing the reply to be made through his friend, Mr. Davis, of South Carolina. To this, Mr. Bergen replied—through his friend, Col. Webb—that Mr. Clement did relate, in his presence, that Mr. Poindexter and Gov. Moore, had agreed to aid him with funds to establish a paper in Mississipi or Alabama: that he repeated the conversation to Col. Webb, but did not make himself responsible for any inferences which he, (Col. W.) might make from it. This reply was returned to Mr. Bergen by Mr. Davis, as unsatisfactory. Col. Webb then informed Mr. Davis, that no other communication would be offered, and so the affair rested for a time.

Mr. Poindexter then addressed a letter to Mr. Hoffman, member of the New York Delegation, making similar enquiries. Mr. Hoffman replied that he also was present when Mr. Clement related the statement made by Mr. Bergen, but that with the inferences and conclusions of the editor of the Enquirer, he had nothing to do; neither did he offer to vouch for the truth of Mr. Clement's assertion. Mr. Poindexter rejoined, and asked if the publication in the Enquirer was made at Mr. Hoffman's suggestion. Mr. H. replied that he had no agency in it whatever. Not satisfied with this, Mr. Poindexter next demands of Mr. Hoffman, whether or not he believed the published statement to be true. Mr. H. very justly grew indignant at this gross insult, and refused an answer. Poindexter then challenged him to fight, but Mr. H. very properly declined meeting him. His last letter concludes thus:—

"Confidently and satisfactorily answered on the only point to which you had narrowed the controversy—you have now appealed to force, and demand of me personal satisfaction—because, although you are a stranger to me, I decline giving any opinion on certain imputations never authorised by me, and to which I am in no sense a party.

"These sufficient reasons preclude the propriety of assigning any. I may deem across, for not accepting your challenge; and I must decline all further correspondence with an individual, who will contend, that he is seriously injured in his honour, because one to whom he is a stranger, and who has confessedly cast no imputations on him, will not volunteer a belief, that imputations cast on him by another, are untrue.

"The Searcher of hearts alone, is entitled to know its unuttered thoughts. Yours, &c."

The next affair concerns Gov. Moore, of Alabama, and Mr. Bergen, and originated in a letter from the former—through the hands of Gov. Miller, of S. C.—calling upon the latter to disclaim any participation in the offensive publication in the Enquirer, referred to in Mr. Poindexter's letter. Mr. Bergen, through Col. Webb, returned a copy of his answer to Mr. Poindexter, adding that he did not perceive any necessity for varying the language. This reply was dated, Saturday, Feb. 18th. On the following day, (Sunday,) Gov. Miller returned the letter as unsatisfactory, to Mr. Bergen, and at the same time begged that Col. Webb might not be the bearer of any other note to Gov. Moore, in as much as he, (Gov. M.) did not consider Col. Webb a gentleman! Mr. Bergen subsequently replied that he had chosen Col. Webb as his friend, to act for him in this matter, and he would receive no communication except through his hands. Thus this correspondence terminated.

Col. Webb, on the 21st February, published in the Washington Globe, a long letter, addressed to Gov. Miller, in which he reviews the whole case. He regards the plea of Gov. Moore, that he will not fight, because Col. Webb, the second to Mr. Bergen, is no gentleman, as cowardly, and adds:—

"If the records of the Courts of the State of New York, could give to my reputation, the Africo coloured lies which the records of the Courts of Mississipi fix upon the character of the Honourable George Poindexter; or if the records of the Police Office of the City of New York, could blacken my name, as effectually as the records of the Police Office of this City, point out the colour of the associations of your principal—the Honourable Gabriel Moore, then could they, with propriety, refuse to meet me as a principal; but even then, inferiorness as I must assuredly would be, they would not have a right to object to Mr. Bergen's employing me as his friend."

Subsequently, in the Washington Telegraph, Gov. Moore published a long "card," directed against Mr. Bergen. He concludes as follows:—

"By retreating behind Webb, he (Bergen) has placed himself without the pale of honor, and below animadversion. I am restrained by self-respect, by respect for the body of which he is a member, and a regard for the feelings of those who would participate in the consequent degradation, from inflicting upon him that personal chastisement which a coloured so base, and which, but for his skulking cowardice, his accidental relation to society would seem to demand. But, degraded as he is, if he can prevail upon any one of the thirty-eight Representatives of New York to bear his answer, (and he surely can if he has any claims to be considered a gentleman,) it will receive the proper notice by me."

We pretend not to say who is right and who is wrong, in this matter; we regard the whole affair as disgraceful to the country. Personal disputes, it is true, will arise, of necessity, where the zeal of political partizans continues discussion; but under no circumstances, is a gentleman executor, able for using the offensive and degrading epithets, which have been branded upon one and another, in this correspondence.

The celebration of the centennial anniversary of Washington's birth-day, appears to have been general in all the principal cities of the Union. Exchange papers from all parts, contain notices of the festivities of the day, and even in obscure villages, where a procession was deemed inexpedient, an oration, or an address, was delivered in a public place. These movements we take as an evidence of the deep regard our people have for the principles which governed this great man, and as a mark of reverence for the virtues of his character. It would be lamentable were it otherwise.

His were no ordinary talents; his devotion to his country was a devotion of honor, of fortune, of life; his example stands sui generis,—unapproachable by that of any other patriot, known in ancient or modern history. To the American citizen a contemplation of Washington's life and character, is ever full of the deepest interest, and the recent manifestations of reverence for his memory, cannot but produce the most gratifying reflections.

The Good Will Fire company have recently much improved on the equipments worn by Philadelphia firemen. They wear leather hats, round on the top, and with capes attached, effectually protecting the neck from water. The cape may be closed in front also, so that under any circumstances, the wearer will scarcely soil his under dress. The equipments are remarkably neat in appearance; we presume they will be more generally adopted.

We hear it asserted that a large portion of the Jackson party in this state, are anxious for the nomination of Judge M'Lean, of Ohio, as a candidate for the Vice Presidency. This, we infer from the favour with which this intelligent gentleman is regarded throughout the Union, would be a very popular measure.

THE FORSAKEN.

It must be acknowledged that the censures in which the illiberal, in past times, indulged against American literature, were not wholly without foundation. The anxious strugglings of an infant people, comparatively poor, and devoted entirely to the accumulation of wealth, affords neither the leisure nor the liberality necessary to foster literature into vigorous life. Authors could find no publishers willing to risk a hazardous appeal to the public; and even if publishers were occasionally found sufficiently enterprising to attempt a new work, without the sanction of an English public, the edition generally slept, undisturbed by public patronage, upon their shelves. Those days have passed.—The lapse of time, and the natural transition from poverty to wealth and from labour to leisure, have opened a new era in the literary history of our country. We may now congratulate ourselves on having a reading public, disposed to regard with favour the efforts of native talent. Every month sees some new candidate for literary honours; and several authors, worthy the reputation of the country, have already found, in the applause and patronage of the public, a substantial and adequate reward.

While we rejoice in the liberal disposition generally evinced towards native authors, it becomes our duty, a duty we owe the literature of the age and the reputation of the country, to see that it does not lead us into encouraging weakness and fostering folly.

No branch of literature has flourished so rapidly, beneath the smile of the public, as novel writing. The press teems with novels, tales, &c. with a fecundity almost incredible; and it must be confessed that the indulgent reception good nature and benevolence, than judgment and taste. In taking up the "Forsaken," we commenced its perusal with a disposition to let no partiality on account of the merits of its author, away us in his favour. The result has shown that it was not necessary. "The Forsaken" is, in our opinion, a production of exalted merit. The plot is well conceived, supported and developed; the incidents are natural and effective, and the characters spiritedly and effectively drawn, and the interest of the piece is kept up throughout, and in many parts thrilling and intense. A description of the state of the country in the vicinity of Philadelphia, when that city was the seat of war, is peculiarly interesting. He has given to each of his incidents a local habitation which the Philadelphia antiquary will readily recognize, and which adds much to the value and interest of the work. The portraiture of the American camp at Valley Forge, during the darkest period of the war, and when our freezing and famished host had dwindled into the miserable shade of an army, will be read with much satisfaction. The incidents of the piece and the grouping and colouring of the characters are highly dramatic and effective.—Among the numerous scenes of that kind which occur through the work, we may mention the death of Corwin as the most striking. But it is not merely for its thrilling and enchaining interest of the tale that we commend the work thus highly. It is with the general filling up and the occasional and passing reflections that we are most gratified. They display an acuteness of observation, a vigor of mind and an elegance and purity of style, which will rescue the work from the sentimental trash of the day and give its author an enviable standing among the gifted and powerful writers of the age.

We had purposed giving a detailed review of the Forsaken, but our limits will not permit it.—We must therefore commend it, as one of the finished and spirited works of the kind which has issued from the American press, to the attention of our readers.

THEATRICAL.

ARCH STREET.—Miss VIOLET, whose successful debut we slightly noticed in our last paper, has appeared in prominent characters, several times during the week.—She has excited considerable interest, as she is certainly an actress of more than ordinary merit. Her perfect self command on the stage, and the facility with which she attends to dramatic business, has given rise to an opinion that she has had more experience in theatricals than the announcement bills gave her credit for. We are assured, however, by the managers, upon whose word we place implicit reliance, that Miss V. is entirely new to the stage, and that her first appearance at this house, was her first appearance on any stage.

The lady's style of acting bears a slight resemblance to that of the fascinating Miss CLARA FISHER, though she has less playful animation about her. Her readings are correct and energetic, and her attitudes are generally graceful. Her countenance is susceptible of much expression, but her transitions from one feeling or passion to another, are less marked than in older actresses. Her movements are perfectly free from embarrassment.

Miss V. performed Virginia on Monday evening in a very creditable manner. Her Kate O'Brien, in the afterpiece, was lively and spirited, and but little, if any, inferior, to Mrs. KNIGHT's personation of that character. She appeared on Wednesday evening, in Clari, for the third time, and was greeted with the most cheering approbation. She is a valuable acquisition to the stage.

Mr. HAMBLIN and Mr. WILSON are performing at this house, on alternate nights. The former is one of the best tragedians of the day. Mr. W., on Tuesday, appeared as Richard the Third. With many parts of the play—especially the interview with Lady Anne—we were much pleased. He is from the western states.

The new and successful Tragedy of Conrad of Naples, will be produced shortly. Much anxiety is manifested to witness its second representation. The delay in producing it, has been occasioned, we are informed, by an exchange of parts, with the two principal performers. Mr. SCOTT will appear as the hero, and Mr. MUNDOCK as Cornelio.—These gentlemen are rapidly advancing in public estimation.

The managers, we understand, have engaged a literary gentleman of this city, to dramatise Bulwer's new novel of Eugene Aram. Many of the incidents in this novel are well adapted for stage representation.

CHESNUT STREET.—The managers of this house are making renewed efforts to present rich entertainments to their patrons. A number of very pretty novelties have been produced during the past week, and others are underlined as in preparation. Mr. BOOTH appeared on Monday evening, in the character of Hamlet—decidedly one of his best. Although a very brief notice was given of his engagement, the house was respectably filled. Mrs. KNIGHT, a vocalist of more than ordinary merit, commenced an engagement on the same evening.

Mr. PEARSON performed the part of William Tell, on Tuesday evening, in a masterly manner.

On Wednesday evening, Mrs. KNIGHT gave several new songs, in the two pieces in which she appeared. Her engagement, we feel assured, will prove a lucrative one both to herself and the managers, and a source of much gratification to the musical ladies and gentleman of this city.

Mr. HAMBLIN and Mrs. KNIGHT performed together on Thursday evening, and attracted a respectable audience.

A new opera entitled the "Maid of Judah" was produced at the Park theatre, New York, on Monday evening. It is a piece in three acts, founded on Scott's romance of Ivanhoe.

Mrs. KEPPEL, recently from Europe, is highly praised in the New York papers. She is expected in this city shortly.

Mr. FINN is performing with great success at New Orleans.

CLARA FISHER is playing at Charleston.

On Tuesday last the large three story brick house, corner of Charles and Camden sts., Baltimore, was discovered to be on fire. By great exertion the flames were subdued before much damage was sustained. Mr. Edward Needles, an efficient member of the fire department, met with a serious accident in the course of the fire. In attempting to remove a hose, he was brought in contact with one of the engines, and had his leg fractured.

Cottage Evening Tales, just published by Messrs. Carey and Hart, is a work full of interesting and entertaining sketches, essays, &c. No reader will lay it down without being sensibly edified. We recommend it to the perusal of our readers. It is sold at 37½ cents per copy.

Dr. Bird, of this city, author of the Gladiator, has just finished, we understand, another tragedy, under the title of Oralloosa, which he intends shortly placing in the hands of Mr. E. Forrest. The scene of the play is laid in South America, and the fable, partly historical, is connected with events which occurred soon after the discovery of that country. It is thought to be even superior to Dr. B's. previous drama.

AMPHITHEATRE AND RIDING SCHOOL.—A correspondent informs us that it is in contemplation to erect a capacious brick edifice, or amphitheatre, at the N. E. corner of Coates' street and Old York Road, as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made—the building to be eighty feet on Coates' street, and one hundred and fifty feet in depth. Connected with the establishment is to be a first rate riding school; and it is further stated that a company is now forming, with the object of raising a capital of $50,000 for the above purpose. The shares are fixed at $100 each, and the books will soon be publicly opened. We give this on anonymous authority, but the project is plausible.

It is mentioned that a meeting of Young Ladies of the first respectability is about to be called in the city of New York, for the purpose of devising some plan to improve the morals and habits of the Young Gentlemen. A preamble and resolutions are in preparation to be submitted, which will no doubt be carried. The object on the part of the ladies is, not to keep company with any young man who is in the habit of tippling, visiting taverns, theatres, oyster cellars, &c. whereby he degrades himself and family, and lays the foundation of his future ruin. If this be so, it will do more good to the rising generation than any measure heretofore adopted to check an alarming and growing evil.

The Huntingdon (Pa.) Advocate relates the following distressing occurrence: On the 1st of February, a man named Peter Miller, with his daughter who was a married woman, and had her babe in her arms, and his son, an interesting lad about nine years old, left Phillipsburgh, in Centre county, to travel across the Alleghany mountain to Hannah Furnace: they took a path believing it to be their nearest road, which had been little travelled, and strayed from their course; they consequently became bewildered and wandered about exposed to rain, snow, cold, and hunger, for three days and three nights; on Saturday last the man arrived at Mr. Phillips' forge, being led thither by the sound of the hammer. Several persons went in search of the boy and woman, and following the marks the man had made, they found them; the woman was sitting under a tree insensible to every thing round her with her babe first folded in her arms; the little boy was still living, but he died before they got him removed to a house. The man and woman have their feet severely frost bitten, and are scarcely expected to survive the hunger, fatigue and cold they endured; but what is most astonishing is that the child is not any thing the worse.

CHOLERA MORBUS.

It is with extreme regret that the subscriber has observed the alarming rapidity with which this symptomatic disease has visited many parts of the European continent; and recent accounts state that the Cholera is not only increasing on the sea-board of England, but that it has actually made its appearance in the metropolis of Scotland.

Futurity alone can tell what time and circumstances may produce, but should this dreadful disease reach the borders of this republic, the subscriber has great faith in, and is of opinion that the Swaim's Vermifuge, if prescribed in the earliest symptoms, will effectually check the disease.

This communication is made without any views to immediate self-interest, either on his own or the proprietor's account—as in the event of the Cholera reaching any part of the United States, they will readily supply any respectable physician, hospital, or medical society, with the Swaim's Vermifuge, free of all charge. So confident are they, that this medicine will check the Cholera Morbus in its infancy, that they are now preparing a shipment for his Britannic Majesty, to be administered through any professional medium he should be pleased to appoint.

HENRY JOHN SHARPE,
79 South street, New York.

A gentleman of New York, whose experience has furnished him with decisive facts, speaks thus warmly of the medical qualities of the Vermifuge.

The above medicine has been in use in my family for the last seven years, for the cure of dysentery, cholera morbus, Diarrhœa, &c. and I have never known it to fail. I have communicated it to many of my friends, who have proved it without a single exception, immediate relief in those painful and oppressive sensations, (usually called gripes,) dysentery, cholera, &c. stopping the disease in the most gentle, yet prompt and effectual manner.

In proof of its efficacy, three of my children were recently cured of a severe diarrhœa, by one bottle each, my wife was last summer, effectually cured of a severe attack of dysentery, by only one dose; I have likewise, experienced its healing effects, in chills and fever, intermittent and bilious fevers,—Being considered of the efficacy, I am desirous of recommending it to those afflicted with the above complaints; and I doubt not, it will be the means of saving many from falling victims to diseases, so rapid in their progress, and so often fatal in their terminations.

Swaim's Vermifuge is a valuable remedy for all diseases arising from a disordered state of the stomach—it immediately counteracts acidity, and alleviates sick headache. It is eminently successful in destroying worms, and removes the morbid secretions to which many of the diseases of children owe their origin.

Swaim's Vermifuge is recommended as being an excellent medicine, and worthy the attention of every family. Its extraordinary cures and its efforts unbidded. No family ought or ever will be without it after a trial.

EPITOME OF THE TIMES.

We understand the trade has opened very briskly between this city and the southern states through the canal. Two hundred and thirty-eight packets and other vessels have passed through since the breaking up of the ice. Another line of steamboats, between this city and Baltimore is also in contemplation, which will give the public the choice of conveyance by the rail-road or canal.

We are pleased to understand that the sale of Mr. Smith's novel of the "Forsaken" has been very extensive, and the opinions of those who have read the work, are warmly commendatory. It should be recollected that this production was written several years since, and is a first attempt in the novel way on the part of the writer. A second, and at his more mature years, perhaps, could not fail to produce a work of still more power and interest.

We have before us a very large mezzotinto likeness of the Rev. William H. Furness, Pastor of the first Congregational Unitarian Church in this city, done by Sartain, from a painting by Sully. The artist has added to the credit he has acquired by several previous productions.

By a letter from Harrisburg, we learn, that the bill, entitled "An act to incorporate the Philadelphia Typographical Society," has passed the Senate, and been sent to the House of Representatives.

We understand that it is in contemplation to erect a new theatre in the Northern Liberties. It is proposed to locate it somewhere in the neighborhood of Vine street; and the plan has already been prepared and adopted.

According to a statement lately made in the House of Representatives of this State, the capital employed by individuals of Berks county in the iron trade, exceeds one million of dollars. About twenty-one forges and twelve or thirteen furnaces are at work, producing annually forty-five hundred tons.

A resolution has past the State Senate, that three thousand copies in English, and three thousand in German, of Washington's Farewell Address, be printed in pamphlet form, with the object of distribution throughout the state.

The Rev. THOMAS PORTER showed us yesterday a bust of the late Rev. JOSEPH EMERSON, pastor of the Mariners' Church in this city. There are few in this city who do not remember the features of Mr. Emerson, and many, very many, will be glad to possess a correct copy of them. The cast is the work of Mr. John Chitty, an Italian artist of this city.

We are requested to state, that the Baltimore passengers were on Tuesday last, conveyed from New Castle to Frenchtown, by way of the Rail Road, in one hour and thirty-five minutes, including one stoppage for the change of horses. The distance is sixteen miles and a half. From this day the regular travel commences on the road.

We understand the Philadelphia Band, propose to give a grand Fireman's Ball, on or about the 12th of March.

We heard on Wednesday, that a widow, the mother of several children, who resided somewhere in the neighborhood of Seventh and Lombard streets, committed suicide, by administering laudanum, occasioned by a fit of jealousy, which caused her death the next day.

The number of taverns or public houses in the county of Bucks, is 127—and they pay $1,441 50 cents into the state treasury for license. Number of stores and retailers of foreign merchandize 129, and their state license amounts to $1,261 50 cents.

The New York Courier and Enquirer mentions, on the credit of a private letter from Paris, that Miss FRANCES WRIGHT was recently married to a Mr. P. a young gentleman from the United States.

The firemen of New Orleans have petitioned the Louisiana legislature for exemption from serving on juries and militia fines.

SUMMER DEARS.—It is stated in the Westmoreland Republican of Friday last, that on the Monday previous, as the stage was passing over the ridge between Mount Pleasant and Dorsett towns, in that county, one of the passengers was heard to cough, and on immediate examination, found to be dead. The intermediate of the Republican was unable to give any information relative to the unfortunate man, other than that his name was said to be —— M'Farland, and he was supposed to be a merchant from the west. On examining his pocket book, it was found to contain $6,000 in cash.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.—On Wednesday evening, about six o'clock, the son of George W. Justice left the residence of the Rev. Thomas Porter, to go home—since that period he has been missing. He was about 20 years of age—thick stature. The handkerchief around his neck had the initials J. W. J. Any information respecting him will be gratefully received by the afflicted family, No. 15 Coates Alley, or Rev. Thomas Porter, No. 34 Vine street.

The funds belonging to Harvard College, are stated by the Boston Transcript, at $504,000 00.

The Delaware Gazette of the 28th ultimo, says:—"The scarlet fever is raging to a great extent in this section of our State. Numerous deaths occur almost daily, the principal part of which are children. In some cases two or three have been lying dead in the same house at one time.

The number of pairs of boots and shoes manufactured in Lynn, Mass. in the year 1831, was 1,675,701, value $943,171. Number of journeymen employed, 1741; number of females, 1775. The value of material used in the manufacture was $413,350.

A correspondent of the New York Commercial, speaking of affairs at Washington, says:—"Poindexter, I repeat, killed a man in a duel, some years ago, and Gov. Moore is no novice in the business." They are both old and gray-headed men—their young and intemperate blood should have cooled by this time. Yet it would seem, in this case, that wisdom comes not with years. We can conceive of no more demoralizing picture than two men, white haired and bent with age, as Poindexter is, standing up and deliberately attempting to deprive each other of life. It is a moral system, and should be frowned down by every good citizen and philanthropist.

We regret to learn that on firing a cannon at the fort on Governor's Island, on Wednesday last, one man was killed and another deprived of an arm.

On Saturday, the house of representatives of Massachusetts, passed an act to be engrossed, declaring, &c. which provides that a person convicted of such an offence, shall be imprisoned in the State prison, for a term not less than ten years, at the discretion of the Judge.

While Washington's Tent was placed in the Park, at New York, on Wednesday, Mr. Reed, of Long Island, aged about seventy-eight years, and who was one of Washington's body guards, during the revolution, took the same station before that tent, which above fifty years before he had occupied. This was quite an interesting exhibition.

Another duel took place in Georgia on the 29th ult. between Mr. Gist and Mr. Fair, both of South Carolina, in which the latter was shot through the heart. "The scene was truly melancholy," says a spectator, "as Mr. F. had three brothers and other relatives on the ground."

A Cotton Factory has been erected in Bridgeport, Ohio, and will soon be in operation. An extensive Flour Mill is now in operation in the same town, lately erected by J. H. Forsyth, of Wheeling.

The final discussion on the third reading of the bill authorising a subscription on the part of the State of New Jersey, to one-fourth of the capital stock of the Delaware and Raritan Rail-road Company, is fixed for the 28th inst. It is a question which has excited much interest in the State, and about which there is a great and rather violent division of opinion.

A melancholy occurrence is related in the Camden S. C. Journal. Mr. Henry Isbell, in Fairfield District, having gone out with his dogs to capture two armed runaway slaves, who had appeared on his grounds, on the night of the 14th ult. was fired upon by one of them in answer, but threw stones at the dogs. He fired, and mortally wounded one, who proved to be his near neighbor and friend, Mr. Meredith Wilson, who expired 17 hours after, leaving a wife and three young children.

The Boston Courier says that—"In Dr. Milnor's church, New York, on Sunday, a gentleman had his pocket picked from the back of his pew. He should have slept upon it."

Mr. John Brosnahan, of Milton, near Boston, was killed on the afternoon of the 3d, in a very sudden and distressing manner. A large and heavy timber, which was borne by oxen in the usual way, upon their necks, had got displaced, and he had stepped upon one end to fasten the chain more securely about it. While in the act of doing this, in consequence of the roads being sloping in that place, the timber slipped, and upsetting the wheels, fell across his breast, and instantly deprived him of life. He was a worthy and industrious man, and much esteemed by his neighbors. He has left a wife and four children.

James G. Shute, suspender manufacturer, committed suicide at the Mansion House in Milk street, (Boston,) where he boarded, by cutting his throat with a razor. Mr. Shute alarmed the family about one o'clock, Thursday morning. Mr. S. had been very intemperate for the last three weeks, and had several times appeared insane, and had behaved strangely the evening before.

The Brookville Republican says:—"Governor Wolf has granted a pardon, remitting the unexpired time of imprisonment in the sentence of the court on John M'Laughlin, who, at the last Court of Quarter Sessions in this county, was arraigned for Gambling, found guilty, and sentenced to undergo an imprisonment of two months in the county jail, pay a fine of fifty dollars, and costs of prosecution.

The Baltimore Gazette says—It is a fact that a parrot died last week on Fells Point, which had been in the possession of one individual 45 years. The parrot died two days before its owner.

The Sheriff of Lancaster County offers a reward of $120 for the apprehension of David Hoffman, George Hambright, Charles Mason, Nathan Foster, James Curry, and Thomas Franklin, who escaped from jail by means of false keys, on the 2nd February.

A letter has been received at Washington City from LAFAYETTE, in which the veteran states he had been very ill of inflammation of the breast, but was on the recovery.—The death of no foreigner would be more generally lamented in this country than that of Lafayette. And yet it is more than probable that he will shortly, another revolution in France, and see his aspirations for the weal and liberty of his native land realized to a still greater extent than at present. The old patriot would no doubt be willing to yield up the ghost after witnessing such a consummation of his fondest hopes.

The dwelling house of Mr. Sharp D. Lewis, in Wilkesburre, was destroyed by fire on Monday evening last.

The Reverend Mr. Kruse, of the Church Missionary Society, stationed at Cairo, gives an appalling statement of the ravages of the Cholera in that city. The population is estimated at 300,000 souls. In the early stages of this frightful disease, 1,500 people were carried off daily; the fatality gradually lessened, however, and at the date of the last letter, September 19th, the deaths had diminished to 50 per day.

The Siamese Twins, says the Alexandria Gazette, now exhibiting at the City Hotel, are objects of great curiosity. We found them acute and lively, and able to entertain their company with all respect and politeness. The singular lusus nature, as exhibited in the case of these boys, has attracted the attention of the most scientific men in the world.

A little girl, aged about six years, says the Lansingburgh Gazette, daughter of Mr. John P. Wickware, was burnt to death on Sunday evening last, while her parents were absent. Her clothes took fire, and before assistance could be had, the poor child was literally burnt to a cinder.

James Welsh, a young woman belonging to ship Nassau, lying at New Castle, Delaware, while in the act of doing something with the rigging, fell from the main top-gallant mast head, and was so much injured, that it was thought it expedient to carry him up to his father's residence, in Philadelphia, where he expired on Sunday morning last. He was about sixteen years of age.

A bill has passed the Maine House of Representatives by a vote of 92 to 9, offering a bounty of $6 each for the destruction of wolves, and $4 for bears, and $2 each for wild cats. It was stated by a member, in the debate on this bill that these animals had, within the last year destroyed property of more than $10,000 value, and he presumed the annual loss to the state from the voracousness of these animals, was equal to fifty thousand dollars.

By a correspondent we are informed (says the Milledgeville Union,) that a highway robbery was committed on Mr. Charles Harsel, of Jasper county, while travelling near the dividing line between the counties of Monroe and Pike. This act was performed by two or three men who beat him with clubs until they supposed him dead, and then robbed him of his pocket book, leaving him dreadfully mangled on the ground. His recovery is considered doubtful. Suspicion has fallen on one individual who has been committed for trial for this foul and barbarous outrage.

A person named Edward Dantzell, of intemperate habits, was frozen to death at Pottsville on Thursday night last.

A most brutal outrage was committed in Dinwiddie co. Va. on the 20th inst. by a slave on the person of a little girl, twelve years of age. The negro has been arrested, and received 150 lashes, from the effects of which he was not expected to recover.

The Erie Observer mentions, that a man named Brown, a stranger, was recently drowned in attempting to cross Conneaut creek during a freshet.

A young woman, in a state of despondency, attempted to hang herself in Erie county, last week.

The Phenix (Alexandria) Gazette of Saturday last, stated that a schooner capsized near Fort Washington, during the severe blow on Thursday night, and all hands on board perished. The steamboat Sydney, then on its way up with the mail from Potomac Creek, was unable to render any assistance. The name of the vessel is not known.

Bedford county, last year, paid a hundred and twenty nine dollars, for fox and wolf scalps: Bradford county, a hundred and eighty six for wolves, thirty seven for wild cats, and five for panthers.

At the celebration, in Boston, on Wednesday, there was on the Mayor's table, at Faneuil Hall, a massy silver wine cooler, which President Washington used at his own table; and on his retirement of office, it was presented by him to the late Col. Pickering of the town of Salem. The Mayor took occasion to mention its history—it excited much attention at the table.

Cologne Water of Superior Quality.

PREPARED after the original

A traveler meets,
Within the limits of becoming mirth,
I never spend an hour's talk withal.

For the Saturday Evening Post.

THE RICH PLANTER AND SLAVE.

Said a rich planter to his slave,
When on his death-bed lying:
"Sambo, this last request I'd have
Granted when I'm laid in my grave,
As poor I feel I'm dying.
That you, for services sincere,
A faithful, honest slave,
Shall be, whenever life's career
Is ended, and you must disappear,
Laid with me in my grave."

"Ah! Massa, no," Sambo replied,
"Me rather get de money,
Dan me no fear yer life betide,
Cause me get freedom on me side,
Den Sambo no more respect.
De very breeze make Sambo shake—
Oh! yes a ting it be,
For yes the devil comes to take,
My Massa, den he make quintake,
And run away yer me."

A HUT FOR THE PRINTERS.

Jim Black who loved to eat a ——
Was courting Betty Brown
A maid who had a jam of cash
To make the pill go down

So Jemmy then one morning said
And took her by the ——
"Dear Betty sweet as pickled maid
The fatest in the land

Hear this ! I make
Some pity now bestow
And put I pray for mercy's sake
A . to my woe

If my destruction be your aim
As you may use
I'd rather die by sword than flame
My warmth of words excuse

You even a] sow
A welcome guest would be
For fate's determined to allow
A alone for me

Rather than hear your frowns will I
Embark upon the seas
For in a ° would I die
Not parish by °°

But to the last your praise I'll sing
In spite of all our pain
And through the world your name shall ring
And ever adore the °°°

There's not a § of our land
Could show your ||
I'd better try to count the sand
Than tell your worth to tell."

Betty who had a feeling heart
Not stiffer so tough as leather
Bade Jemmy for the priest to start
To —— them both together

BREVIER.

EXPLANATIONS OF THE ABOVE.

— Dash, ' minute, ° degrees, ' apostrophe, ° stars, , period, § secret, ; semicolon, ‖ parallel, ! dagger, ~ brace, ‡ double dagger,

PUFFS AT HALF PRICE.—A Boston Philosopher advertises, that he has on hand a quantity of Puffs, which being partially damaged, he will dispose of at 25 cents a piece. We have lately seen several newspaper puffs considerable worse for wear.—Camden Jour.

LAWYERS.—A number of years ago, two wealthy farmers in Freehelsire fell into a dispute about a bargain, and determined to have their difference settled according to law. One of them accordingly repaired to the county town, and stated his case to a lawyer. The professor regretted that he could not undertake his cause, having previously been engaged by his opponent, but would do what was in his power to serve him by recommending another lawyer. The farmer thanked him, and took from him a letter of introduction to his friend. The wafer being wet he thought he might as well take a peep at its contents: he did so, and read as follows—"There are two fat geese come to the town, pluck you the one, and I'll the other." The farmer immediately waited on his opponent and showed him the letter. The matter was soon arranged without the lawyers.—Scotsman.

On a dispute between two officers on board a vessel whose crew were Irish and English sailors, one of them contended that the English could not answer a common question with half that alertness which was natural to the Irish. A bet being proposed, it was agreed to try the point immediately; and an English seaman was asked, what he would take to go up aloft blindfold in a hard gale: "I would take a month's pay," said the fellow. "And what would you take, Pat?" said one of the officers to an Irishman. "By St. Patrick! (said he) I would take nothing but fast-hold."

THE LIFE OF "A GENTLEMAN."—He gets up leisurely, breakfasts comfortably, reads the paper regularly, dresses fashionably, lounges fastidiously, eats a tart gravely, tattles insipidly, dines considerably, drinks superfluously, kills time sufficiently, naps elegantly, goes to bed stupidly, lives uselessly!—Tatler.

DANGER OF BEAUTY.—In the first attempt made by Mary Queen of Scots, to escape from imprisonment in Lochleven Castle, she disguised herself as a laundress, with whom she had changed clothes, and when seated in the boat and putting off from the shore, she was discovered by lifting her hand to her head. The extreme beauty of her hand, with its whiteness, discovered her at once, and she was carried back to her chamber in bitterness and tears.

Let your dress be as cheap as may be without shabbiness; think more about the color of your shirt than about the gloss or texture of your coat; be always as clean as your occupation will, without inconvenience, permit; but never, no, not for one moment, believe, that any human being, with sense in skull, will love or respect you on account of your fine or costly clothes. A great misfortune of the present day is, that every one is, in his own estimate, raised above his real state of life; every one seems to think himself entitled, if not to title and great estate, at least to live without work.

ORIGINAL ANECDOTE.—A friend related to us the following bull, committed by a son of the Emerald Isle now in his employ, which we think worth publishing: On going to the hog house one morning during the late cold weather, Pat discovered that a litter of pigs, which had been in existence but a short time, were all dead; and on making known the discovery—"Faith, sir," said he, "I don't b'lave they'd lived if they had not died, for the weather is so very cowld.—Montrose Volunteer.

Mr. Moore, author of the Fables, was a long time under an expensive prosecution in Doctor's Commons, for marrying two sisters. While his cause was pending, his proctor one day called upon him, and Mr. Moore being then writing the tragedy of the Gamester, read to him the four first acts, with which the proctor was so much affected, that he exclaimed, "Good God! sir, how can you add to the distress of this unhappy pair in the last act?" "Oh! very easily, (replied Moore;) I shall put them both into the Spiritual Court.

The Rev. Sidney Smith, in his speech at the Taunton meeting, said that the attempt of the House of Lords to stop the progress of the Reform, reminded him of the conduct of the excellent Mrs. Partington, during the great eastern storm at Sidmouth, in 1824. The tide rose to an incredible height; the waves rushed in upon the houses; and every thing was threatened with destruction. In the midst of the fearful commotion of the elements, Dame Partington, who lived upon the sea beach, was seen at the door of her house, with mop and pattens, trundling her mop, and sweeping out the sea-water, and vigorously pushing back the Atlantic. The Atlantic was roused and so was Mrs. Partington; but the conquest was unequal. The Atlantic beat Mrs. Partington. She was excellent at a sea or a puddle, but she could do nothing with a tempest.

The most eloquent speaker, the most ingenious writer, and the most accomplished statesman, cannot effect so much as the mere presence of the man who tempers his wisdom and his vigour with humanity.—Lavater.

For the Saturday Evening Post.

FOX HUNTING.

"Along dark gray oaks, whose boughs on high
Are paled by the rising sun,
With quivering step, and glancing eye,
Our lofty steeds are wont early on;
It is a brilliant day;
Each sportsman's heart in his breast is leaping,
As through the woods our dogs are creeping,
To find their well known prey.

He's up—he's up—oh, hear the cry!
How blithely through the wood it rings!
With exhilarating shout, and sparkling eye,
Earth joyous bounds, forward springs;
Away! away! away!—
Swift, onward, through the forest dashing,
We catch the exclamations, gaily thrashing,
From ev'ry thousand spray.

Pro fit the joy of the chase and song,
And the thrilling pow'r of beauty's eye;
I've felt th' excitement, deep and strong,
Of the tainted cord, and the rolling die;
But mortal, on earth's fair face,
Can make the blood, with spring-tide flush,
Along its veins so wildly rush,
As the noble, manly chase.

"Tis seen—the dogs still onward stream,
With deep-toned cry, and countenance speed;
But few of the huntsmen now remain—
My steed! my steed! my gallant steed!—
Oh, fail me not to day;
The fence is leapt, the ravine cleared,
My friends are left, the pack is neared—
Away! away! away!

In view! in view! I see him now—
My shouts within his ears are ringing;
Like arrows from a well-strung bow,
The super dogs are onward springing;
Nearer, and nearer still—
My noble horse still thunders on;
The brush is mine—I am alone—
He cannot reach you hill.

He stops—he turns—prepared to die—
The dogs rush on with howling hate;
How wildly glantes his hopeless eye—
Wha! feel for the prowling robber's fate?
Oh! no, indeed, not I;
The joy that in my bosom springs,
Is worth the lives of a thousand things,
That were but born to die.

I. C.

A MIS-CHANCE.—The unexpected marriage of the Earl of Barrington with Miss Foote was as sudden as it was singular. The noble Earl having taken great interest in Madame Vestris' Olympic speculation, exerted himself warmly in her support, and one evening invited her to supper at Harrington House, and to bring Miss Sydney with her for a companion. Something occurred to prevent Miss Sydney from accompanying the fair Lessee, who, in consequence introduced Miss Foote, whom the latter, by her graceful and unassuming manners, combined with her personal beauty and accomplishments, so completely won the affections of the Noble Earl, that he immediately offered her his hand, with an earnest desire that the nuptials might be solemnized on the ensuing morning. The lover's ardor effectually overcame the scruples of the lady, and on the ensuing morning, Miss Foote became the Countess of Harrington. We have every reason to believe that there is not a happier couple than the Noble Earl and his lovely and talented bride. It is not positive as to say what prevented Miss Sydney from accepting the Earl's invitation, neither can we presume to imagine the nature of that young lady's thoughts upon the singular result, but certainly there is every appearance of her having lost a CHANCE.

WITH A TRIFLING PRESENT.

Not want of heart, but want of art
Hath made my gift so small;
Then, loving heart, take hearty love,
To make amends for all.
Take gift with heart, and heart with gift,
Let will supply my want;
For willing heart, not hearty will,
For is, nor shall be scant.

GENERAL ASPECT OF PALESTINE.—The hills still stand round about Jerusalem, as in the days of David and of Solomon. The dew falls on Hermon, the cedars grow on Lebanon, and Kishon, that ancient river, draws its stream from Tabor as in the times of old. The sea of Galilee still presents the same natural accompaniments, the fig tree springs up by the way side, the sycamore spreads its branches, and the vines and olives still climb the sides of the mountains. The desolation which covered the cities of the plain is not less striking at the present hour than when Moses, with an inspired pen, recorded the judgment of God; the dwellings of Jordan are not less regular in their rise than when the Hebrews first approached its banks; and he who goes down from Jerusalem to Jericho still incurs the greatest hazard of falling among thieves.—There is, in fact, in the scenery and manners in Palestine, a perpetuity that accords well with the inveterate support of its historical record, and which enables us to identify with the utmost readiness the local imagery of every great transaction.—Edinburgh Cab. Lib. No. 4.

INDIAN SAGACITY.—An Indian, upon his returning home to his hut one day, discovered that his venison, which had been hung up to dry, had been stolen. After taking observations upon the spot, he set off in pursuit of the thief whom he tracked through the woods. After going a great distance, he met some persons, of whom he inquired, if they had seen a little old white man, with a short gun, accompanied by a small dog with a bob tail? They replied in the affirmative, and upon the Indian asserting that the man thus described had stolen his venison, they deemed it to be informed how he was able to give such a minute description of a person he has not seen! The Indian replied thus:—"The thief I know is a little man, by his having made a pile of stones to stand on in order to reach the venison from the height I hang it, standing on the ground, that he is an old man, I know by his short steps, which I have traced over the dead leaves in the woods; and that he is a white man, I know by his tormint and his tree when he walks, which an Indian never does. He gun I know to be short, by the mark of the muzzle made by rubbing the bark of a tree on which it leaned; that his dog is small, I know by his tracks; and that he has a bob-tail, I discovered by the mark it made in the dust where he was sitting at the time his master was taking down the meat."

The steward of the Duke of ——— representing to him the necessity there was of more economy in his household, gave him a list of many persons whose attendance was superfluous. The duke, after reading it, said, "It is true, I can do without all these people; but have you asked them if they can do without me?"

A clergyman took for his text the following words—"Vow, and pay unto the Lord thy vows." An Indian heard him very attentively, and stepping up to the parson, thus accosted him—"I vow I'll go home with you, Mr. Minister." "You must go then," replied the parson. The Indian afterwards went to have supper: and then stay all night. "You may," replied the clergyman, "but I vote you shall go in the morning."

A pound of iron in a crude state is perhaps worth a cent. It is converted, we will suppose, into steel, and then into watch springs. Now, according to a calculation made in a work upon this subject, there are 7,000 grains in a pound weight, and every weight is worth a tenth of a grain. 70,000 watch springs, worth say 25 each, yield $17,000, for the pound of iron, or rather for the labor expended upon it.

A HINT TO THE SEDENTARY.—Speaking, reading aloud, and singing, are useful kinds of exercise, and it is supposed that this is at least one cause of the greater longevity of clergymen, public speakers, teachers in universities, and schoolmasters. Dr. Andrews pleasantly observes, that one reason why women require less bodily exercise than men, is, that they are in general more loquacious. Hence those sedentary artificers, who, from habit, almost always sing at their work, unintentionally contribute much to the preservation of their health.—Henderson on the preservation of health.

A CUT FOR GALLANTRY.—A young officer of the National Guard has just received a check which will probably cure him of gallantry for life. He had bestowed the pretty wife of a dyer during a long time with letters and compliments, followed her about like her shadow, and at last became so terribly importunate, that she revealed the affair to her husband, who dared her to give him an appointment. Hardly had the conference begun, when the dyer and several of his workmen appeared, and seizing the unhappy lover, gave him a good rousing in a tub of indigo.—Then, in order that the dye might be solid and durable, they made him stand before a large fire till he was entirely dry. Unfortunately, he was obliged to attend parade the next day, and in consequence he made such plentiful use of soap and eau-de-Cologne that the tint of indigo disappeared, but it was to give place to a beautiful sky blue.

BORROW YOUR EARNS.—On the 29th of June a letter was read from M. Johard, of Brussels, announcing that he had brought to perfection, a new machine for boring the earth to any depth, and thoroughly well. He stated that his plan had been tried with the greatest success in the neighborhood of Marienberg, where he had rapidly attained a depth of seventy-five feet through an ancient rock of phyllade, mixed with argillaceous flints. By a process something similar, though less perfect, wells have been dug as far down, to a depth of from 2,000 to 3,000 feet, through solid rock. M. Johard anticipates the greatest advantages to geology from his discovery; and, with the usual enthusiasm of projectors, looks forward with confidence to the period (not far distant) when we shall be well acquainted with the centre of the earth, as we now are with the surface.

COLD FEET.—A condition so unpleasant in its direct sensual impression, and so replete with morbid tendency should not be tolerated, but overcome if possible. This may be effected in most instances, by instituting and undeviatingly pursuing, brisk friction of the feet and legs, by means of a flesh brush, every night and morning, during half an hour at each time, and uniformly wearing lamb's wool stockings by night as well as by day. This practice, if unremittingly prosecuted for six months, will be usually found to have the beneficial effect of fully and permanently restoring to the feet a healthy extension of the circulating fluids, and with that advantage a natural state of warmth.—Medical Journal.

It is computed that there are wandering about the streets of Paris 106 organ-players, 152 singers, 271 musicians, and 230 mountebanks, three-fourths of whom are strangers in the city, and only 139 of whom are French. It is well known that the crowds which these personages collect, are very favorable to the operations of pickpockets. It appears by the late papers, that these people are to be subjected to rigid rules, and among other regulations, are to go home at 6 o'clock in the evening in the winter, and at 8 in the summer. In this city such strollers are yearly increasing; and, by and bye, the corporation will be induced to enact laws for their regulation.

A certain lodging house was very much infested by vermin. A gentleman who slept there one night told the landlady so in the morning, when she said, "La, sir, we haven't a single bug in the house." "No ma'am," said he, "they are all married, and have large families too."

The minister of the town of A. by some strange mystification of events, became somewhat unpopular among his people; and they, to show their spunk, one certain Marchmeeting, elected him long queue. The gentlemen elect happening to be present, rose and addressed the moderator thus: "Sir, I was chosen some years ago, as Parson of this flock, but as my flock have turned into wolves, I think this change of office exceedingly appropriate. I will endeavor to serve according to the best of my abilities."

MATERIAL TEMPERANCE.—A Scotsman, which had built his nest on the church roof of a town, was observed to continue regular visits long after the time when the pious birds had taken their flights. This occasioned surmisings continued throughout the year; and in the winter, a gentleman who had all along observed her, determined on investigating the cause. He therefore mounted a ladder and found one of her young ones detained by winter, by means of the string of worsted, which formed part of the nest, having become accidentally twisted round its leg. Being then extricated from growing in own substance, it has been fed and nurtured by the continued exertion of his mother.—Edinburgh Reporter.

The following anecdote illustrates very forcibly the advantages of infant schools, where indigent mothers, who are compelled to work for a livelihood for themselves and offspring, may leave, during the hours of labor, their young ones in safety, free from the contamination of vice, and blessed by the countenance of virtue and piety.

It is related in a Philadelphia paper, that many decent women at service in the city, or otherwise too much occupied to take proper care of their own children, place them out to nurse, and often pay the greater part of their wages to persons who take care of them. A woman who maintained her living from this class of mothers, lately called in a medical practitioner to prescribe for one of her nurslings that was ill. The physician was surprised at perceiving strong symptoms of intoxication, (insanity produced by intoxicating liquors.) He asked the woman what was the infant's food, and she said bread. Being further questioned she said, "he won't eat bread, sir, unless it's soaked in whiskey. They are very fond of that, and it's an excellent thing for keeping them quiet. It makes them sleep from morning to night." Does this text require comment?

The word "Fact" is as great a contradiction as we have in the language. The Delaware was fast, because the sun was immoveable; and then the ice disappeared very fast, for the contrary reason—it was loose. A clock is called fast, when it goes quicker than time, but a man is told to stand fast when he is desired to remain stationary. People fast when they have nothing to eat, and eat fast, consequently, when opportunity offers.

MARRIED—In Sullivan, N. H. Mr. Horace Frost, to Miss Melinda Locke.

The cold this winter's so severe,
That ladies have had much to fear;
As for Melinda—he not shocked!
She is a Frosty beauty; Lock-ed.

In Halifax, Vt. Mr. Jacob Whitney, aged 64, urbis minor, Miss Dennis Boice, 14!

From a London Paper.

ARCHDUKE CONSTANTINE AND HIS MONKEY.

Herve Herring, in his recently published work, entitled "Poland under the Dominion of Russia," relates some disgusting instances of the cruelty and caprice of that arbitrary despot, Constantine, of Russia. The Grand Duke had, it seems, a favorite monkey, with which the two legged brute used to amuse his leisure hours. "A monkey," says the writer, "may be also considered as an event that place at the Belvidere, which proves that the most petted favorite is not to be trusted. One day Constantine was busy writing in his own apartment, while his favorite monkey was, as usual, capering about, and meddling with everything. At length he fixed his eyes on a loaded gun, and snatching it up unperceived, he deliberately took aim at his master, and was on the point of pulling the trigger. At this moment the Grand Duke happened to raise his eyes from his desk, and though almost petrified with alarm, uttered a loud cry, upon which the monkey averted the weapon, and discharged its contents in another direction.' This anecdote gives rise to the following lines:

TO CONSTANTINE'S MONKEY.

A plague on thee—thou clumsy brute!
Thy awkwardness, beyond endure,
Will bring down on the pageant race
Deep and indelible disgrace!
Thou wouldst have enra'd a lasting foese,
Hadst thou but taken sweet aim.

When Brutus haughty Cæsar fell'd,
By love of liberty impell'd,
His countrymen rejoiced a deed,
Which from the yoke their nation freed:
Hadst thou, like him, perform'd thy part,
And smote a tyrant to the heart,
Admiring millions would have thanked thee,
And amongst patriot heroes rank'd thee.

Never henceforth at fairs or wakes
Will I give apples, nuts, or cakes,
To the vile pags, nor share my bun
With them, as I have often done.

No!—never, long as I may live,
Thy blundering aim can I forgive;
And may thy execrated name,
Be "damn'd to everlasting fame"
For that mischievous act of thine,
Which spar'd the ruffian Constantine.

SWEARING TO KEEP PURPOSE.—A few years ago, a man in Nova Scotia, seeing his sons intoxicated, said to his wife, "Do I act as bad as he does when I am drunk?" "Yes, and ten times worse," answered the good wife. Then pulling off his hat and throwing it down on the floor, "I swear," said he, "by my old hat, I will never drink another drop of rum or any intoxicating liquor." And he has kept his word. This anecdote is well authenticated.

CAUTION.—An order has passed the board of aldermen of Boston, that no member be allowed to address the chairman with his cane in his hand.

APOTHEGMS FROM SELDON.

John Selden was a writer of considerable eminence about the time of the revolution in England. Perhaps Clarendon's short character was an exaggeration, "that he was a person whom no character can sufficiently describe to one that follows him in his merit and virtue; but his memory was too great for his judgment, and his love of case still stronger than his love of liberty. His works are nearly all too dull for any, unless for persons of reference, with the exception of his Table-talk, from which, we have ventured to cull a few of the choicest apothegms.

MARRIAGE.—Marriage is a desperate thing. The frogs of Æsop were envious when they had a great mind to name water, but they would not leap into the well, because they could not get out again.

PEACE.—King James was pictured going easily down a pair of stairs, and upon every step there was written, peace, peace, peace. The wisest way for men in these times is to say nothing.

POWER.—They that govern most make least noise. You see when horses pull a barge, they that do the drudgery work, slash, and puff, and sweat; but he that governs sits quietly at the stern and seems to seem to stir.

WISE.—'Tis reason a man that will have a wife should be at the charge of her trinkets and pay all the scores she sets on him. He that will keep a monkey should pay for the glass he breaks.

WISDOM.—Wise men say nothing in dangerous times. The lion you know called the sheep to ask her if his breath smelt. She said, Aye. He bit off her head for a foal. He called the wolf and asked him: he said, No. He tore him in pieces for a flatterer. At last he called the fox, and asked him: Truly he said I a cold, that I could not smell.

WORDS.—Words must be fitted to a man's mouth. It was well said of the fellow that was to make a speech for my lord-mayor, he desired to take measure of his lordship's mouth.

CEREMONY.—Of all people ladies have no reason to cry down ceremony, for they think themselves slighted without it. And were they not used with ceremony, with compliments and addresses, with legs and kissing of hands, they were the pitifulest creatures in the world. But yet methinks to kiss their hands after their lips, as some do, is like little boys that after they eat the apple fall to the paring from the love they have to the apple.

DAMNATION.—To preach long, loud, and damnation, is the way to be cried up. We love a man that damns us, and we run after him to save us. If a man had a sore leg, and he should go to an honest, judicious surgeon, and he should only bid him to keep it warm and anoint with such an oil (an oil well known) that would do the cure, haply he would not much regard him, because he knows the medicine beforehand an ordinary medicine. But if he should go to a surgeon that should tell him, Your leg will gangrene within three days, and it must be cut off, and you will die unless you do something that I could tell you, what listening they would be to this man. Oh, for the Lord's sake tell me what this is, and I will give you any content for your pains.

BIBLE.—Sermonum scriptorus. These two words have undone the world. Because Christ spoke them to his disciples, therefore we must all, men, women, and children, read and interpret the Scriptures.

Henry 8th made a law that all men might read the Scriptures except servants, but no women, except ladies and gentlewomen, who had leisure and might ask somebody the meaning.

BISHOPS.—The bishops being put out of the house, where will they lay the fault now. When the dog is beat out of he room, where will they lay the stink.

TO MISS ELIZA SNOOKS.

Eliza Snooks, Eliza Snooks,
'Twas very wrong in you
To send me forth, last Thursday night,
With such a cold adieu.
Thy soften'd tones went to my heart,
And still they murmur there,
Inspiring dreams of bliss, alas!
I ne'er may hope to share.

Eliza Snooks, you kiss'd your hand
On that bright moon-lit eve,
And felt, or kindly feign'd regret,
That I so soon should leave.
Ah, whether it was feign'd or felt,
Is more than I can tell—
But, that it' smoothed' a foolish heart,
Alas! I know too well.

But why should I confession make
To an indifferent ear?
Hearts only should to hearts confess,
And thine is gone, I fear.
Well, be it so—I shall not weep—
And singing 'n all in vain—
I'll keep my heart for six long hours,
Till thine return again.

TIME BILL.—A little girl at Sheffield, hearing a deal said about the passing of the bill, asked, with great simplicity, "will it pass our door?"

A large placard was hawked about in London recently as follows: "Drain drinkers must expect to be the first victims of the Cholera."

LIFE IN PHILADELPHIA.

AN UNCONNECTED TALE.

Having a call to make upon Alderman B. I was introduced to him on the bench, where I found him engaged in deciding between three others of my countrymen negroes, who had committed themselves in a love affair; and I cannot better describe the matter, than give a copy of the notes taken on the occasion by the learned judge.

"My name is Antonio Costa de Wilson. I ash been paying a visit to Miss Araminta Arabella Tomson, in de oyster cellar, where she lib; when Mosso Sambo come in and say, 'You hab no business here.' So I look at Miss Minta, and she say I Ash, and dis gumplin and me have a tussle. De bankechief is not his, but one Miss Minta made present of to me."

"I can assure you," exclaims the sooty rival, "dat Miss Araminta did gib me de witchin glance, which tole me as plain as eye could speak, dat I was de more welcome winter; and as to de bankechief, it is Miss Minta's; and I hab a better right to it dan dat oder genteman, as I hab present to her a sissar, a timble, and a lock of my hair."

[To be continued.]

FEMALE INGENUITY.

Secret Correspondence.—A young Lady, newly married, being obliged to show her husband, all the letters she wrote, sent the following to an intimate friend.

"I cannot be satisfied, my Dearest Friend! blest as I am in the matrimonial state, unless I pour into your friendly bosom, which has ever been in unison with mine, the various deep sensations which swell with the liveliest emotions of pleasure, my almost bursting heart. I tell you my dear husband is one of the most amiable of men. I have been married seven weeks, and have never found the least reason to repent the day that joined us, my husband is in person and manners far from resembling ugly, cross, old, disagreeable, and jealous monsters, who think by confining to secure; a wife, it is his maxim to treat as a bosom-friend and confidant, and not as a play thing or menial slave, the woman chosen to be his companion. Neither party he says ought to obey implicitly;—but each yield to the other by turns—An ancient maiden aunt, near seventy, a cheerful, venerable, and pleasant old lady, lives in the house with us—she is the delight of both young and old—she is civil to all the neighbourhood round, generous and charitable to the poor—I know my husband loves nothing more than he does me; he flatters me more than the glass, and his intoxication (for so I must call the excess of his love,) often makes me blush for the unworthiness of its object, and wish I could be more deserving of the man whose name I bear. To say all in one word, my dear, ——, and to crown the whole, my former gallant lover is now my indulgent husband, my fondness is returned, and I might have had a Prince, without the felicity I find with him. Adieu! may you be as blest as I am unable to wish that I could be more happy.

N. B.—The key to the above letter, is to read the first and then every alternate line.

M. Chabert's Tapuyas Elixir,

AN unintoxicating cure for the Tooth-ache, which by such is the greatest confidence is offered to the public, having, during the last year, repeatedly proved (positively bought) for the tooth ache, which has never failed to cure, even the most violent cases, whose boldness can only be compared to the ignorance of those who have recommended it to the public.

To Hon. Chabert.—This is to certify that we have tried your Tapuyas Elixir on several of our patients, and it has always taken a certain effect; we have found it to be perfectly harmless in any degree, and have not the least doubt that it preserves the teeth. It is the only remedy we have met with, that we can answer as well. It is therefore a valuable discovery, and an entertaining cure. We give you credit for such a valuable discovery, and have great reason to suppose it infallibly; if it can be of any benefit to you.

D. B. George, Member Royal College of Surgeons, London, 18th March, 1831. Wm. Gibbs, M. D. Member Royal College of Surgeons, Edinburgh. Thomas Wharton Jones, Member Royal College of Surgeons, Eng. J. Jones, Surgeon, 63 Dover Road. Thos. Wilkinson, Member Royal College of Surgeons. Jas. Wilson, Member Royal College of Surgeons, &c. &c. Peter J. Cooper, Member Royal College of Surgeons, &c. &c. Geo. Cooper, Surgeon, Haymarket. Thomas Robert Gould, Duke Law, 6 Gloucester place, Blackfriars Road.

New York, Dec. 9th, 1831.

To Mons. Chabert, Sir.—In answer to your note of this morning respecting the result of my observations of the effects of your Tapuyas Elixir, I have the pleasure to state, that I have witnessed its application to the cases of severe toothache, in all of which the relief was immediate, and for ought I know the cure permanent. Its harmless nature and its local application to recommend it for general use.

Yours respectfully, W. ANDERSON, M.D.

C. Chabert, your agent, informed me, that you had never been relieved, in this country as well as in Europe. The demand for the Elixir has been so great, it is found difficult to supply agents and others with the quantity they require. Persons have over are making, that all can be supplied with such quantities as they may require.

Y. C. respectfully informs the public, that he has appointed the subscriber, Sole Agent for the United States, with power to appoint agents in all the cities and principal towns, for the sale and quantity of the Elixir, to supply the agents appointed, and those to be appointed, druggists, country merchants and others in wholesale prices, and to retail at the lowest price, which no doubt will meet with prompt attention.

☞ Notice is premised that that which has X. Chabert provided on the bottle, and on the wrapper, X. C. & J. G. C. Sole Agents per bottle. 25 per cent. allowed for cash on any quantity taken at first.

The following are agents already appointed, in the city of Philadelphia, J. Brown, Drug and Chemical Store, north east corner of Chestnut and Fifth streets.

In New York, M. C. Hassan, Druggist, No. 203 Broadway; C. Chilton, chemist and apothecary, No. 34 Park Row.

In Baltimore, Md. Fielding Lucas, druggist, corner of Hanover and Market streets.

In Boston, A. W. Price, druggist.

In Washington, Md. Johnson, druggist.

In Fredericktown, Maryland, Wm. Fisher.

In Washington, Wm. Gunton, druggist.

JAMES G. CLARK,

feb 25-3m No. 152 Arch st. Philad. General Agent for the U. S.

UNITED STATES WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

Suspender Manufactory,

No. 31, South Front Street.

THE Subscriber respectfully informs Southern and Western Merchants, and the citizens of Philadelphia, that he keeps constantly on hand a general and extensive assortment of Suspenders, in all their variation, which he is willing to dispose of on very moderate terms for cash, or city acceptances. All orders to any amount, from any part of the United States, accompanied with cash or acceptances, will meet with immediate attention. Gentlemen wishing to purchase in the above line, will find it to their advantage to call and examine for themselves.

Also, an extensive assortment, of great variety, of Webbings, colours not to be exceeded in the United States. People in the trade will find it to their advantage to call and examine for themselves.

JAMES DAVIS.

feb 25—3m

Five Dollars Reward.

LOST, on Saturday morning, the 19th Feb. in Lombard street near Sixth Seventh to Second, a double cased Silver Dublin made WATCH, maker's name Thomas Carswell, No. 16 Dublin, steel hands and button over the key hole, with a steel chain and key, and one gold escape Key set, with red cornelian. Whoever should find the said Watch and return her to Joseph Davis, No. 31 South Front street, Suspender Maker, or to J. Davis, north west corner of Lombard and Seventh streets, shall receive the above reward.

feb 25—3t

A NEW DISCOVERY!

BOOK-KEEPING,

THE Subscriber informs the public, that he will from his new plan, teach the science of Book-keeping in half the time than any other who advertises to teach in this city. The instruction given shall be decidedly more extensive and systematical, than any other taught in the U. S.

Satisfactory proof of the above will be given at the Academy, S. W. Corner of Sixth and Race streets, Philadelphia.

R. MEGONIGAL.

jan 28—tf

CARD.

L. M. CANTELO respectfully invites the public to examine his entire new article, made expressly for the cure of COLDS, and some of the most prevalent diseases that follow when neglected; such as RHEUMATISM, sore or swelled throat, sore Throat, &c. highly approved of by all who have given it a trial. The bill of directions, proves just other benefits derived from its use; the cure is immediate and interesting to all persons. Apply at the store, 123 Chestnut street, two doors above the Post office, or at the proprietors, C. MERRILL, 178 Centre street, a few doors above Fourth

jan 7—tf

Marshall's Concentrated

Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla, for the Cure of OBSTINATE Eruptions of the Skin, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Blotches which come from an impure habit of Body, Scaly Eruptions, Pains in the Bones, Chronic Rheumatism, Tetter, Scrofula or King's Evil, White Swellings, Syphilitic Symptoms, and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood, produced either by a long residence in a hot and unhealthy climate, the injudicious use of mercury, &c.

Price $1 per bottle. A liberal discount made to those who purchase to sell again.

Prepared and sold, only, at Charles Marshall's wholesale Drug and Chemical store, No. 8 Minor street, between Fifth and Sixth streets, south side. Also at his wholesale and retail store, No. 216, Market street, Philadelphia.

feb 14—tf

Washington Hotel,

(Late Mrs. Fisher's) No. 6 north Fourth st. Phila.

THE subscriber respectfully announces to his friends and the public, that he has recently taken the above commodious establishment, which, for the accommodation of strangers, is one of the most eligible situations in the city; being in the centre of business; and possessing the unrivalling personal attentions to the comfortable lounger.

The house has undergone considerable alterations and improvements, and has been newly furnished throughout, and adapted for the use of strangers and families.

The subscriber begs, by his assiduity and attention, to merit that patronage, and the support of the public, which has been bestowed on the former keepers, and hopes that the public will favor him with a share of their patronage.

The omnibuses pass, by his residence, and attention, to merit that patronage, and the support of the public, which has been bestowed on the former keepers, north Third street, and the public Ledger Hotel, south Fourth street; and the subscriber hopes, by his attention, to merit a share of the patronage.

JONATHAN WADE.

feb 11—3mos

Winter Goods,

AT NO. 240 MARKET STREET.

WILLIAM BARRETT, begs leave to inform his friends and the public, that he has received, this year, a large assortment of WINTER GOODS, some of which are,

Are, Circles, Cassimeres, Satinets, Petersham, &c.

Pelisses, Cloaks, Wilton, Ingrain, Dutch and other Carpets, Hearth Rugs, Stair Rods.

Etwas, plain and fancy Linen Cambrics, assortment of Bonds, Welts, Swansdown and Domestic Flannels, Bleachery of Bonds—

Devil's Dust, Cotton Wool, Cotton Comfort—

Turkey Finish, assortment of Plain and Twilled Flannels, Linsey Woolsey.

A variety of English, German and French Merino Cloths—

Every variety of Cassimere, Hosiery, Silk and Woollen Gloves of all prices.

Merino, Worsted and Cotton Shirts, Silks, Satin, &c. Gros de Naples, Gros de Tours, Gros de Swiss, Florence, &c.

All kinds of Sewing Silk, Twist and Twine, Machine—Brush and other Velvet Ribbons, &c.

He wishes those persons who want articles in his line, to favour him with a call before buying elsewhere. It will also give him much pleasure, to display his stock of goods to persons who may not wish to make immediate purchases.

N. B. He wholesales and retails for cash or approved acceptances.

jan 7—3m

THOMSONIAN

BOTANIC MEDICINE STORE,

No. 156, north Fourth street, opposite Dr. Physick.

NOW open and for sale, all kinds of Botanic Medicine, in various forms, the most valuable medical books, roots and herbs; they have been used and approved by practitioners of Much care and pains have been taken to collect all the principal vegetable medicines used in Dr. Thomson's system of medical botany. These, with many other kinds are well preserved, in a crude state, or prepared, and tinctured, with printed directions for using them. Various preparations and components of syrups, tables, barks, gums, balsams, &c. that have been approved and used successfully, in some of the most popular cases of fevers, Consumption, Dropsies, Rheumatism, Asthma, Venereal Diseases, Scrofula, Gout, Liver Complaints, common diseases of women, &c. These, with several valuable patent medicines and specifics, are offered on the most reasonable terms for cash. Country physicians and others, ordering packages, will be supplied. A new and valuable remedy for agues, or chills and fever, is now offered to the different at a very moderate price. Tincture for agues, cures, or fevers, a powerful cough, a sure remedy, which if duly administered, will cure the Dysentery, Cholera Morbus, Cholera Infantum, &c. &c.

DR. GEORGE W. CLARK.

nov 12—3mos

Just Published,

BY M. T. C. GOULD, No. 6, north Eighth street, Philadelphia, the second volume of The American Repository of Arts, Sciences, and useful Literature. Price one dollar.

Contents.—No. 1. Sketch of the geological structure of Hartz, viz. Ecclesiastical History, Secret History, Church History, Ancient History, Modern History, Natural History, Ancient Hartz; Miscellaneous History, including Mythology, Biography, Memoirs, Chronicles, Annals, Journals, Genealogy, Romances, Fables, &c.; History of Antediluvian Animals, Fossil Remains, and the Animal kingdom, Mineral Kingdom, &c. &c.

Nos. 2 and 3. A Chronological and Historical Dictionary, of persons, in alphabetical order.

No. 4. Natural Philosophy.

No. 5. Geography and Statistics of Europe.

Nos. 6, 7, and 8. Chemistry.

No. 9. Optics.

Nos. 11 and 12. Mechanics, a complete system in 40 pages, illustrated by numerous and beautiful engravings.

☞ The above mentioned work is published in quarterly monthly numbers of 64 pages each, and can be supplied from the commencement. The third volume commences January, 1832.

jan 7—tf

Correct Likenesses

TAKEN in Profile in several hours. Full view, full length, bust and groups, from 25 cents to $2. Also,

Portraits in Miniature

Neatly executed in bust, half length, full length, and family groups, from $5 to $25.

And the resemblances warranted perfect, by

J. WILSON,

67 Arcade, west avenue, (up stairs.)

feb 16—3*

Glue, Neat's Foot Oil,

CURLED Hair, and Cow Hide Whips, constantly on hand and for sale at the Manufactory of CHARLES CUMMINGS, at the Manufactory of CHARLES CUMMINGS.

N. B. The highest price given for Horse Hair, Hogs and Cattle's Feet.

oct 1—ly

Wood Turning.

JOHN FULTON, No. 3 Bank Alley, south side of the Pennsylvania Bank, and back of the Merchants' Coffee House, respectfully informs Chair Makers, Coopers, and the public generally, that having erected a Steam Engine for Turning, he is now prepared to execute all orders in this way at the shortest notice, and on such terms as will ensure to